WELCOME TO

ADULT PC GUIDE magazine is a first in its field.

In the fast-growing world of adult material accessible via personal computers, there is growing confusion and frustration among PC owners and users who wish to access, view and utilize this material. There is also a lack of knowledge about "surfing" the networks to find the material scattered along cyberspace's super highway.

Up until now, there was no central 'library' of specific information about the vast quantity and variety of material available—what it is and how to find it. The knowledge and time required to find and access available material has been frustrating—if not downright discouraging—to all but the most sophisticated computer users.

In ADULT PC GUIDE, we are not only researching, finding and cataloguing much of this information, we are reviewing and listing the various types of adult material available on new CD-ROM releases as well. We are also listing active Bulletin Boards and reviewing a selection of those we find most interesting.

This new cutting-edge publication will also contain informative and enlightenting articles on the latest developments in both hardware and software for the PC owner and user. We will also be interviewing various stars of new CD-ROM releases as well as presenting erotic and provocative pictorial layouts of these new superstars of adult cyberspace. We will also have a "personals" section for reader-to-reader contact on a wide variety of topics and information pertaining to the adult PC world.

Let us have your opinions, not only about ADULT PC GUIDE but what you'd like to see in future issues.

THE INFORMATION SUPERHIGHWAY IS UNDER CONSTRUCTION. COMPUTER USERS ARE TRYING TO BUILD THE ROADWAY OF THE FUTURE, AN AUTOBAHN OF RAPID RESOURCES THAT COVER EVERY TOPIC, INCLUDING SEXUALLY EXPLICIT MATERIAL. MEANWHILE THE UNITED STATES GOVERNMENT IS TRYING TO INSURE THAT THIS NEW THROUGHWAY IS SAFE FOR TRAVEL, WHICH MAY IMPEDE YOUR FIRST AMENDMENT RIGHT TO FREE SPEECH. THE PROBLEM IS THE ROADWAY OF THE FUTURE AND THE BLUEPRINT FOR A SOCIETY ARE HEADED FOR A HEAD-ON COLLISION AND NEITHER SEEMS TO WANT TO YIELD.

I am underage, and I have been surfing the net collecting all sorts of "adult" and pornographic material for almost a year now. I feel that I am healthy, well-educated and a good human being throughout. I am also considered a teenager and apparently not adult enough to see certain types of material. I also want to add that I have been neither physically nor mentally affected by viewing all the explicit material that I have retrieved over the internet. I don't and am not willing to understand why it is such a problem for me to look at a pair of breasts or a vagina or a couple engaging inintercourse or another type of explicit. WHAT TYPE OF DAMAGE IS BEING DONE HERE?"

On a day when most Americans celebrated their freedom and independence with fireworks, Louis Santos' Internet posting sparked a fiery discussion over a constitutional powder keg.

"Believe me, they (politicians) don't give a shit about the poor little kiddies out there, as though the sight of sexual organs is so terribly devastating! So what? A kid sees some erotica on the Net, gets hot and masturbates...So f'ing what? How many of us well-adjusted human beings haven't done the same thing 40,000 different times? That's MY two cents" wrote one Internet user.

"Our motto is simple. LIVE AND LET LIVE. We do not want "Big Brother Watching!" replied one Internet user who was trying to recruit new members for a group calling itself One Voice Net. "All of us on the Internet know that the Net is the wave of the future. But how it looks in the future is being determined TODAY."

You don't have to pay One Voice Net its $12 dollar a year membership fee to know that everything in the past and present affects the future. That's a big part of the reason why so many online computer users are up in arms.

The government is taking a lot of fire from Internet users in retaliation for its recent salvo that could set decency limits on the Internet and change the way it's used in the future. It's the age old constitutional controversy over what constitutes pornography and is such material protected under the First Amendment of the Constitution?

The shot heard round the world, at least by millions of computer users, came in June of this year when the United States senate overwhelmingly passed the Communications Decency Act. The act, now on the table in the House of Representatives, would make it a crime to knowingly transmit any indecent material over a computer network accessible to people under the age of 18. The punishment for these transgressions would be up to $100,000 in fines and prison terms of up to two years.

And it's not just gifs and bitmaps that the bill would try to block. It would also prohibit any "obscene, lewd, lascivious, filthy or indecent" request, suggestion or comment that is made over a computer network.

"I want to keep the information highway from resembling a redlight district," said Nebraska Senator James Exon, sponsor of the legislation.

If Exon succeeds and the Decency Act becomes law, computer users like a certain Jake Baker would no longer be protected by their First Amendment rights to free speech.

Baker may have been the first computer user to sail the uncharted constitutional waters of online pornography. Baker, a University of Michigan student, published a violent sex fantasy on the Internet and used a fellow college student as the story's victim. The fantasy reportedly involved aspects of kidnapping, torture, rape and murder. Baker was charged with transmitting a threat to injure or kidnap across state lines but was recently acquitted. The judge found that while Jake Baker's story was offensive, he had committed no crime.

"I want to keep the information highway from resembling a redlight district,"

Nebraska Senator James Exon

But the main focus of the government's campaign against pornography on the Internet has been aimed at the effects of sexually explicit material on underage users such as Louis Santos.

"We face a unique, disturbing and urgent circumstance, because it is children who are the computer experts in our nation," Republican senator Dan Coats of Indiana told Time magazine.

And those computer experts have access to literally millions of images, a growing number of which deal with sexually explicit topics. A recent study conducted by researchers at Carnegie Mellon University titled Marketing Porno graphy on the Information Superhighway found that, of all Usenet newsgroups that store digitized images, almost 85 percent of the pictures involved sexual content.

"I knew it was bad. But then when I got on there, it made Playboy and Hustler look like Sunday-school stuff," Exon said in introducing the Communications Decency Act.

One of the reasons the Internet has become one of the most popular forms of adult entertainment is because the topics and images that can be found online are those that are mostly taboo among most magazine publishers. Images of pedophilia, beastiality, bondage and discipline, infantilism, defecation, piercing and sado-masochism can be found by the net surfer with relative ease.

Lawmakers are even more concerned about underage computer users being exposed to a more dangerous computer element, referred to by some as predators.

Predators are people who lurk on the Internet and try to lure unsuspecting underage computer users away from their monitors and into trouble.

Recently in Florida, a music teacher, two college professors, an Air Force major and two male lovers were arrested for soliciting sex from young boys through online computer networks.

"He was like a spider in his web waiting for someone to come by," said Doug Rehman of one of the men arrested. Rehman, a Department of Law Enforcement officer, posed as a 15-year-old in order to catch the alleged pedophilias.

But just because there are some lunatics endangering innocents on the Internet, doesn't mean the government needs to take control, say the computer freedom fighters.

"It's government censorship," Marc Rotenberg of the Electronic Privacy Information Center told Time magazine in its July 3 cover-story called Cyberporn. "The First Amendment shouldn't end where the Internet begins."

Even the usually ultra-conservative Speaker of the House, Newt Gingrich, challenged the constitutionality of the Communi-cations Decency Act.

"It is clearly a violation of free speech, and it's a violation of the right of adults to communicate with each other," Gingrich told a caller on a cable-TV show.

Civil libertarians and computer industry watchdogs argue that the information highway does not need government policing because it is already being done by online services, sysops (BBS systems operators) and "cybercops."

Almost all online providers have some sort of Terms of Service contract which is supposed to be signed by every customer and most reputable BBS services require age verification before access will be granted to their domain.

"Anyone who uses AOL (America On Line) or any other service signs a contract to become a user. If they don't follow the rules, the service provider can kick them off," said attorney Al Robbins in an Advocate article called CyberSnare (Feb. 21, 1995).

If you don't think rules made by service providers have a lot of bite, you may be surprised to learn that they do have the power to look through your private files.

A loophole in The Electronic Privacy Act of 1986 gives a system administrator the ability to go through private files in the course of its administrative duties.

But it isn't just the so-called Cybercops that are lurking the Internet looking for transgressors. In January of '95 the FBI began an investigation of AOL customers who were allegedly placing pornographic material on the Internet.

According to published reports and the Advocate article, suspects in the FBI sting were uploading adult material that included children having sex with adults and even animals. AOL would not comment on the investigation.

The FBI can go after such material using a 1991 act prohibiting sexual exploitation of children and the Title 47, Section 223 of the United States Code placing restrictions by the Federal Communications Commission on obscene and indecent telephone communications.

The information superhighway may need some informational signs to help guide users to their destinations

But even self-censorship leaves the question of what is considere obscene and what is protected under the First Amendment.

In the past, the constitutionality of so called "obscene" or "pornographic" material has been measured against the standards set down by the Miller v. California supreme court case.

In 1973 a jury found Marvin Miller guilty of mailing unsolicited brochures advertising "adult book and a film in violation of California's obscenity law. In addition to descriptive printed matter, the advertising contained photographs and drawings portraying men and women engaged in sexual acts.

The Supreme Court, speaking through Chief Justice Warren Burger, promulgated the standard as follows: (1) whether the average person, applying contemporary community standards, would find that the work, taken as a whole, appealed to the prurient interest; (2) whether the work depicts, in a patently offensive way, sexual conduct defined by the state law; and (3) whether the work, taken as a whole, lacks serious literary, artistic, political, or scientific value.

Held up to those standards it would seem that the Internet and its sexual content does not qualify as obscene or pornographic. One reason is that taken as a whole, the Inter-net does not appeal to the prurient interest. A fact the Carnegie Mellon research supports.

The Carnegie Mellon study points out that despite the popularity of pornographic image files, they represent only about three percent of all messages on the Usenet. The study also concluded that the Usenet itself represented only 11.5 percent of all traffic on the Internet. It doesn't take a computer expert to figure out that the remaining 88.5 percent of Internet users are surfing for information on a wide variety of non-sexual topics.

The problem with this argument is that the Miller v. California parameters were applied to printed material and not computers.

The real conflict between the Constitution and computers could come down to, not the definition of pornography, but, the definition of the Internet itself.

If the Internet is considered a print medium then it would enjoy strong protection against government intervention. If it is considered a broadcast medium, then it may be subject to endless government regulation, including censorship.

But the Internet is a mutant medium in that it is multimedia, incorporating many differ ent forms of communications.

For some computer users though the issue isn't about defining the Internet or obscenity, it's about defining access to the Internet.

"I don't think they should control the content as much as they should attempt to control the access," says Dianna Vesta of St. Louis.

Dianna Vesta, or Goddess Dianna Vesta as she is known by her loyal slaves, is the owner and system operator of The Fetish Network. The Fetish Network is a bulletin board system on the Internet that caters to adults who require the guidance of a lifestyle mistress and professional dominatrix.

"I know a lot of people think that the Decency Act  really sucks and that it invades our privacy. But,at the same time there are a lot of children out thereare very cmoputer proficient and can access this material with ease, and they are the ones  who don't know the difference between what is healthy and what is not. We can't watch every move our children make, so as a nation we have to be responsible," says Vesta.

"I have a teenager so I know what a lot of people are faced with. I want to be the one who explains things to my son about the world. I don't want him to go off across the world and learn things," says Vesta.

"I don't think we should deny information of any sort as long as those who do it are responsible with it. You've heard the cliches. Safe, sane and consensual," says Vesta.

"There needs to be a much tighter reign as to what access is granted. The only way to control it is to go back to the way it was with requirements for membership and validating age.

If tighter restraints are placed on access to adult material on line through some kind of government licensing of operators, then content wouldn't be a problem because the members of BBS' would be consenting adults, says Vesta.

That would make government control easier because then the feds would only have to check those BBS operators with permits instead of going over every file.

Vesta said the proliferation of fly-by-night adult BBS' has really hurt the adult market and that controlling access would return business to entertainment boards.

"As soon as everyone started jumping on the bandwagon we were no longer a specialty," says Vesta.

"A lot of sysops who work very hard at the integrity of their BBS and provide a true service have been affected by the ease of the general public having access to whatever they want," Vesta says.

That's one of the problems with public throughways. It's very hard to limit who uses them.

At the very least the information superhighway may need some informational signs to help guide users to their destinations and let them know what off-ramp leads where.

And if hazards develop along a the route, then laws may have to be enacted to set guidelines for travelers.

Ultimately it is the people who travel the road that decide its fate. If they are reckless and take no responsibility for how they use a public resource then some authority, state or federal, may have to establish rules and enforce them to make travel safe for everyone. But that still doesn't mean the authority can tell us what lane to use or where to go.

The only thing for certain is that the speeding technology of cyberspace has passed society on the Information Highway and now society is trying to catch up.

TITS AND ASS

ARTICLE BY MARSHALL McCONNELL

Older game players will remember that in the pre-Doom days, sex and violence in computer games consisted of Pac Man eating a bunch of dots and trying to win favor with Ms. Pac Man, a big yellow circle with a pink bow. If you ate enough dots and managed to elude some ghosts that couldn't scare Casper, you got to see a scene of how Pac Man and his androgenous counter part met and fell in love.

Those were the days when the story meant more than the graphics. It was enough to get the girl and survive. And if you happened to die, the fact that you lost your life meant more than how you got killed.

That was the stone age of computer games.

But, the romance is over and now computer games have gotten down to business. And for some of today's mainstream computer game makers, the business is sex and violence on a scale that looks like a nightmare directed by Russ Meyer and Stephen King starring Leatherface from the Texas Chainsaw Massacre.

Some of the hottest selling computer games contain more, and stronger, rating information than a lot of adult CD-ROMs.

For good reason. A brief overview of some of the most popular titles on computer store shelves reveals a veritable Jeffery Dahmer potpourri of blood and guts (and we're not talking about some strategy game with General George Patton).

Some of the "coolest" scenes in today's computer games would make even the most hardened, combat-weary, killing machine suck his thumb and cry for his mommy.

ROKT

Scenes of dissected men with their spinal chords exposed impaled on spikes (Doom II from id software) and other poor souls who are ripped apart by hand and, while they are flopping around like a suffocating fish, are heaved into a stream of acid where they turn into a skeleton right before your eyes (Mortal Kombat II from Acclaim). And if you happen to be a lover as well as a fighter, then you will certainly enjoy the new trend of busty "Robo Babes" who are very easy on the eyes and can even rip them out of the sockets if you're not nice to them.

Mortal Kombat III (Acclaim) has a steel fan wielding beauty dressed in blue named Sheeva who can turn heads, whether with her curvaceous body and ample breasts or simply by cutting them off.

No MK fan would forgive us if we didn't mention the lovely and lethal Sonya Blade. A beautiful woman with a great ass who really knows how to kick other people's butts. In the movie based on Mortal Kombat, Sonya is played by Bridgette Wilson, a real eye-popper in every sense.

While games such as Mortal Kombat (Acclaim) and FX Fighter (GTE Interactive) have brought new meaning to the phrase "killer looks," other games have placed more emphasis on beauty and brains than brawn.

Sandi is the long-haired, skimpy black dress-wearing object of desire in National Lampoon's Blind Date (Trimark) game. Sandi can be a bit dangerous but she is ultimately interested in the same thing you are - having fun.

More and more computer games are featuring not just one or two female characters but multiple women roles to play.

Although they are more cartoonish than some other characters, the majority of the cast in Metal and Lace: The Battle of the Robo Babes (Megatech) are nubile young women.

Then there are the vixens who star in Voyeur (Interplay). These women are willing to do anything to get what they want and they let you watch them doing it.

Real life sex symbols are also popping up in mainstream computer games. Tia Carrere (Wayne's World) can be seen— sexily clad of course— in The Daedalus Encounter (Virgin Interactive Entertainment) and sultry Stephanie Seymour makes an appearance in Hell.

And who could forget former porn star Tracy Lynn's non-sexual appearance in Wing Commander III (Origin).

It's important to note though that of all the games mentioned above, not one shows anything that couldn't be seen in a PG-rated movie at the multiplex.

Especially when it comes to sex. Sex in the mainstream computer game is treated somewhere between National Geographic and Playboy, just enough to entice but not enough to corrupt (Sorry, Mr. Dole).

A prime example of the tongue-in- cheek handling of sex in computer games comes in the form of a wildly successful series called Leisure Suit Larry (Sierra).

Created by Al Lowe and Mark Crowe, this campy cartoon centers around the life of the title character, a polyester suit wearing loser in love with more strike outs to his credit than Nolan Ryan.

Larry's misadventures— there have been six so far— use every double entendre known to manin order to skirt the issue of sex. The women who are the object of Larry's desire are sexy but they are also just illustrations.

While sexy characters are growing in number in computer games they have a long way to go to catch the real draw of most computer games violence.

Although the youth of American still has a healthy interest in sex, most younger computer users are buying games that allow them to see body parts and blood flying against the well. This is evidenced by such new titles as Confirmed Kill, Dungeon Keeper and No Remorse.

There are as many arguments as to why violent games sell as there are Doom levels, but one theory is known as the "gaper phenomenon" and is as interesting as discovering a secret game level. The "gaper phenomenon" is a theory developed by University of Chicago sociologist Edward Laumann as to why people are drawn toward unusually graphic sights, whether they be related to sex, violence or both.

"There is a curiosity for things that are extraordinary and way out," Laumann says.

Laumann conducted a 1994 survey called Sex In America and concluded that while the people surveyed seemed compelled to look at highly graphic material, it was tantamount to driving by a bloody accident. They were intrigued by the horrible sight, but didn't want to be a part of it, Laumann concluded.

That may be true but today's high resolution, interactive computer games are enabling watchers to get much closer to truly horrific events.

Depending on your age and viewpoint, here are either some of the best or worst games which feature various levels of bits and asses!

Doomed To Be The Best

If you have ever used a PC or have had a friend who owns one, then you've probably already heard of Doom and Doom II from id Software.

If you haven't heard of Doom, you're probably still using an abacus to add and subtract.

Doom makes Pac Man and everything that came before it look like Pong. You'll remember Pong as the game with two paddles and the "ball" that moved back and forth.

The story behind the Doom saga is that there has been an alien invasion of Mars and the only person who can stop it is you. Your only weapon is a handgun with 50 bullets.

So how much damage can a simple .45 do to the monsters? Not much, but if you play your cards right then you can find other weapons, including a shotgun and a chainsaw, to literally cut down the invaders.

The primary color in this shoot'em up classic is red - as in blood red. With a good computer and standing at close range with you weapon dejour, you can spill the guts of any number of gruesome creatures.

There's no sex or even any sexual references in Doom or it's companion episodes, unless, of course, you're attracted to balding, beer-bellied, chaingun wielding maniacs.

As for Doom II, it's more of the same, only this time the planet you're trying to save is Earth! Gulp.

MSR: 386/33 DX, MS DOS 5.0, 20Mb of free hard drive space, 4Mb of RAM, VGA graphics. Supports mouse and joystick.

GAME HINT: After you think you have mastered this game, buy a hint book and see how much you're missing.

Lampooning Blind Dates

On the lighter side of computer gaming is National Lampoon's Blind Date.

Whether you're a narcissistic, horny hermit looking to be embarrassed by a beautiful babe, a fan of National Lampoon movies and magazines, or just looking for some good natured fun, you should enjoy this set up.

Sandi, in case you skipped the first part of this article, is a beautiful brunette who looks great in her low-cut, skimpy, black dress.

You have been set up with Sandi by D.U.D.S. - Dates Unlimited for Desperate Schmucks. Through questions and scenarios you're supposed to win Sandi's favor and possibly more than just another date.

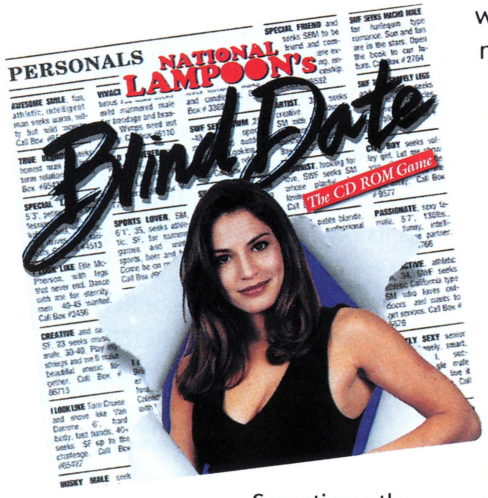
If you think you know the answer then you're destined to spend the evening searching for the right words to soothe Sandi.

There are a few instances of slap stick violence thrown into this CD-ROM, but mostly it's non-stop innuendo and thinly veiled sexual references.

Blind Date lives up to the best traditions of National Lampoon and you don't have to spend a lot of money on a woman you may never see again!

MSR: MAC, IBM and PC compatible. 486/25, 8 Mb RAM VGA, Sound Blaster compatible with Windows 3.1 or better. MAC SPECS: 8 Mb RAM, 4Mb hard drive space with System 7.

GAME HINT: Don't be afraid to take a few chances with Sandi when she asks you questions.



Sometimes the right answer is the wrong answer with Sandi. Typical woman!

A Plot You Can Sink Your Teeth Into

The makers of Noctropolis, Flashpoint, hail their latest offering as "a beautifully rendered, adult graphic adventure about the grisly things you dream."

Seldom do products live up to box cover kudos from their creators, but the folks at Flashpoint come closer than most.

The story revolves around the final issue of a comic book called Darksheer. Darksheer is a superhero who may be a real life savior. Your job is to find Darksheer so he can save the City of Darkness from the forces of the evil, including an insatiable seductress named Succubus.

This CD-ROM combines animation with over two hours of digitized, non-linear video and spoken audio.

Noctropolis is an eerily sexy and noirish tale of good versus evil that has lots of sexual undertones and a brief flash of toplessness. There is some violence but most of it is done in a comic book style.

MSR: MS DOS 386/33 or better, 4 Mb RAM (580k free), DOS 5.0 or higher, SVGA required. Sound blaster compatible.

GAME HINT: Click on everything, even if there are things that you think may be of no use. Also don't forget that the GOTO command allows you to walk.

Voyeuristic Pleasure

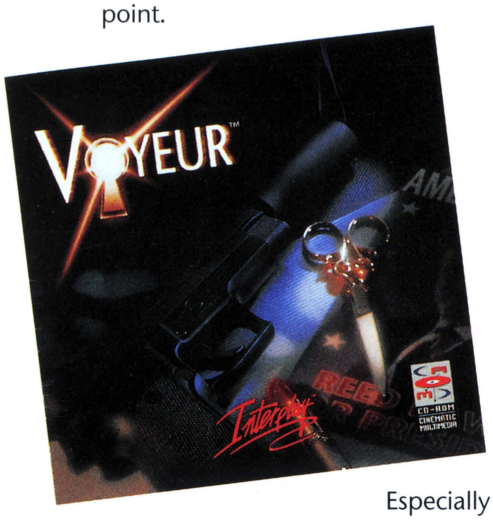
There is something strangely titillating about watching a total stranger from an unnoticed vantage point.



Especially if that stranger is a scantily clad woman.

Voyeur (Interplay) puts you in the spying seat and provides you with the ability to videotape everything you see.

The catch is that you are working for the government and are supposed to be gathering all the information you can on a presidential hopeful.

This game is a strange concoction of Porky's, Rear Window and a mini series about the Kennedy's, but without the more interesting elements of each. There are plenty of lingerie-wearing women and several sexually suggestive scenes in Voyeur, just as you would find in Porky's and a barbecue at the Kennedy compound, but unlike both of those events there is no nudity. Even Porky's gave us a shower scene.

About the only resemblance to Alfred Hitchcock's thriller Rear Window is the fact that you are not directly involved in any of the action. Much like Jimmy Stewart who suffered with a broken leg in Rear Window, you just sit and watch what happens.

True voyeurs might really enjoy this game on a stormy night when they can't get out, but adult game players may want to look elsewhere for their fix.

MSR: Voyeur is for IBM and PC compatibles with DOS 5.0 or higher. It requires a 386DX-40 cpu or faster and uses 1 meg EMS and 580K free conventional memory.

GAME HINT: Bring popcorn and make sure you have loads of conventional memory available.

On The Rise

It's been called everything from a Doom rip-off to Doom's cousin, but Rise of the Triad is it's own game and is even better than Doom in some aspects.

ROTT is the story of an elite fighting team that gets caught up in a cult's plan to take over Los Angeles and sacrifice thousands of innocent people.

You have to fight your way through the enemy forces and stop the cult using whatever weapons you can find. Sounds familiar, right?

The plot is similar to Doom and at times it sounds vaguely like Wolfenstein, but Rise Of The Triad has its own merits that will keep you coming back for more.

The graphic violence of ROTT is one reason you'll like it. ROTT gives you just as many ways to kill the bad guys as Doom and a few Doom doesn't. If you are close enough and blast the guards in the opening screen using the bazooka you can dodge their flying eyeballs and watch as the blood slowly drips down the wall.

Another great aspect of ROTT is the arsenal that you have access to. Sure, Doom has it's chainsaw, but ROTT has a whole arsenal and even lets you have two pistols and use them at the same time.

Finally, there is a sexy element to ROTT not offered in Doom and that is the availability of two female characters. One is a redhead named Thi Barrett and the other is an Asian named Lorelei Ni.

If you love action but have a weak constitution ROTT provides a special lockout password that can adjust the level of violence seen in the game.

MSR: IBM and PC compatible. Requires 386DX-33 cpu with 4MB RAM (8Mb recommended) and 8Mb free space on hard drive. Supports sound card and joystick.

GAME HINT: Show no mercy when one of your wounded victims begs for it. He could be waiting for you to turn your back so he can put a bullet in you!

Lizard On The Loose

Lounge Lizards are a dying breed, but now they have a computer game that will allow them to live on forever.

There have been six Leisure Suit Larry episodes but the latest, Larry's Greatest Hits and Misses, is a comical compilation of all of them.

Leisure Suit Larry is a comical little guy who got his name for good reason. He is a throw back to the disco era when guys with gold chains and white polyester suits were considered happenin.' Unfortunately for Larry, even then he wasn't cool, so you can imagine how well he fits in 20 years after that fad died.

Larry's misadventures are told in a cartoon, storybook form with live voice overs.

The object for Larry is...anything with two legs. Fortunately for us, creator Al Lowe made his cartoon characters sexier than Jessica Rabbit.

Larry always seems to encounter beautiful babes and endeavors to win favor with them in any way possible, from procuring batteries for a vibrator to fixing a liposuction machine at a health spa.

There are sexual situations at every turn, including some hilarious encounters with homosexual towel boys and adventures in mud-wrestling, but the operative f-word in this game is fun.

You could just play with yourself but Larry makes sex a lot more fun than two hands should be allowed to have.

MSR: 386 cpu with 25 Mhz. Requires 4MB or memory and 256 color VGA.

GAME HINT: Perrier water takes out a lot of different stains. That won't help in this game but it's something to keep in mind.

Mortal Danger - A Real Kick

If you're an avid gamer who likes his bloodshed but isn't into lugging around a gun, then get ready for Mortal Kombat.

The Mortal Kombat (Acclaim) series is the hottest ticket among chop saki computer players.

The story is simple. You're a contestant in The Outworld Tournament and your job is to stay alive and work your way up the bracket so you can get a shot at Shao Kahn, supreme ruler of Outworld.

You can chose from 12 different characters, including several deadly beauties.

The violence is graphic, especially early on when you're just learning how to move. Bodies flop like fish, heads pop off and blood spurts like a sprinkler system depending on how badly you beat your opponent or vice versa.

One classic moment comes when one contestant has his spinal chord ripped from his body.

It could take a while for you to master all of the movements of each character, no matter if you are using a joystick or keyboard.

If you decide to use the joystick, you might want to give yourself a few practice rounds to learn what combinations of button and stick movements are the most effect against each opponent. (Some of us are still working on our flying, round house kick.)

Outworld is a mesmerizing place full of highly detailed backgrounds and digitized duels that would make John Claude Van Dame wet his pants.

MSR: Designed for a 486 or higher cpu but can be used on as low as a 386DX/33 Mhz pc. 8 Mb of RAM recommended but will play with 4Mb. Requires a whopping 25Mb of free hard disk space! VGA graphics card with 256 VGA also required. Sound blaster and joystick recommended.

GAME HINT: Brains don't always win over brawn, but being crafty can keep you alive longer and help you conquer every opponent. Stay low!

Built Robo Babes

If you don't like all of the macho undertones in Mortal Kombat, then you may want to try Metal & Lace (Magetech).

This high-kicking cartoon karate game pits you against a stable of sexy "Robo babes." The goal is to fight your way through the bevy of beauties so that you can face Gunder, the World Ultimate Champion of Robo Fighting, a despicable sport that has been banned except for on the isle of Mecha.

While Mortal Kombat focuses on violence, Metal & Lace has a much softer side. All of the women have doe eyes and look more like characters out of Speed Racer than trained killing machines.

The actual fighting that takes place is done in a comic book style, as is all of the story. Compared to Mortal Kombat and the other kung fu wanna bes, Metal & Lace is mild.

But what Metal & Lace has to offer is sex, more specifically nudity. With a special NC-18 upgrade you can see naked women, albeit cartoon women. The base model is NC 13 and is still a little racy, but does not contain any nudity.

MSR: 386 or faster with DOS 3.3 or higher. Requires 640K RAM and hard disk and VGA. Sound blaster and joystick compatible.

GAME HINT: Don't make copies for your friends! That should go without saying but after seeing the special piracy pamphlet included in our copy of the game, you have to think these guys mean business.

STACKED DECK

♥ Preview, pg 19

Kathy Willets, our Adult PC Guide media celebrity this issue is, to put it mildly, a phenomenon in the arena of "instant stardom," (or, instant notoriety, some people might say). According to Kathy, she went from being just a good-time party gal—a married woman who had decided she needed some freedom to explore her sexuality—to the center of a local sizzling sex and prostitution scandal involving the police department, city officials and respected businessmen—which soon reached the national media's attention. Kathy and her ex-police officer husband have used what could have been a disastrous situation, to their advantage. Kathy has gone on to become a highly paid entertainer, XXX-Video star and the star of a CD-ROM video game which is featured in this issue. Let's let Kathy give us all the details of how this came about:

PC: Tell us about yourself.
KW: I was born in New York City but my family moved to Ft. Lauderdale, Florida, when I was five years old. I have an older and a younger brother. I attended school at St. Thomas Aquinas in Ft. Lauderdale. I'm from a pretty strict Catholic background which, I believe, might have contributed to my rebellious nature regarding sex and personal freedom. I had a pretty typical lifestyle for a nice Catholic girl. After I graduated from school, I married my childhood sweetheart and moved with him to Akron, Ohio, where I proceeded to have two sons. I was married for seven years and then we divorced. I

I returned to Ft. Lauderdale with my two children. Being a single parent, I had to go to work, so I got a job. I began working as a sales assistant to a Stockbroker and eventually worked my way up to becoming a broker myself.

PC: When and how did you meet your current husband,Jeff?

KW: Well, it was in 1985. I got pulled over by Jeff, who was a traffic policeman, for a traffic violation. We began talking, and we made a date. That's very ironic because I was quite lonely and wanted to meet someone. So, I had a lot of girlfriends and we'd go out at night to the clubs. I was seriously looking but I never met anyone interesting while I was out looking. Then I get stopped for a traffic violation and nearly arrested and that's when I meet the man of my dreams.

PC: And what's Jeff's background?

KW: He had been married before and has a daughter from his previous marriage. After dating for a year, we were married in 1986.

PC: And in 1991, you became an instant celebrity. Tell us how that came about.

KW: Well, my two sons had moved out and had gone to live with their dad, and Jeff's daughter was away at school.

I had been thinking for a long time that I'd like to try a different lifestyle...sort of experiment sexually. I had been raised a strict Catholic and was pretty naive. I discussed it with Jeff and he said go ahead. So I ran an ad in the paper. Well, the response was overwhelming! And the amazing thing was that I got so many calls from prominent people in the community!

PC: Like the mayor, for instance?

KW: Yes, (laughs), the mayor, which turned out to be an unfortunate contact. Anyway, at first I would meet the guys for drinks and sort of get to know them. And the ones that I chose to go to bed with, I did. After all, I'm an adult...they are adults, and I assumed that what I did in the privacy of my own home was my own, and nobody else's business.

PC: What about Jeff's presence? We understand that he was there when you were going to bed with these guys.

KW: At first, I thought it was important that he be nearby in case I got into trouble. You never know when someone is going to become kinky or want to do things you don't want to do. So, yes, he was around. He wasn't peeking from a closet and getting off on the activity. He was just nearby in case I needed him.

PC: Go on, tell us about how things got out of hand.

KW: Well, I was having a ball. I was getting to know new people. I was having a great time sleeping with the ones I wanted to, and I was really getting into the swinging lifestyle. Unfortunately, one of the men I was seeing became infatuated with me. And the next thing I knew he was telling me I had to leave Jeff and that he wanted to marry me and all of that. It was sort of a Glenn Close (in the movie Fatal Attraction) thing in reverse.

He wouldn't leave me alone so I broke it off with him. The guy was really hassling me. And then, when I told him to get out of my life, he went to the authorities in retaliation. Of course, with Jeff being a deputy sheriff and the guy saying that money was exchanged and that I was accepting gifts, etc., the sheriff became very interested So, then sheriff Nick Navarro and his deputies decided to set up a sting. This was much easier for them, I imagine, than doing real crime work, and Nick Navarro was already in trouble for alleged corruption in his department. So, probably with the idea in mind that he could save his neck, politically, they set me up.

PC: What did they do?

KW: They sent a deputy in to see me and then they came and busted us. It was immediate,– we had no warning whatsoever– and the next thing we know we are under arrest. I had never been in trouble with the law in my life and I was panic-stricken.

NYMPHO-MANIA: Kathy Willets has become even hotter since her much publicized prostitution-prozac trial. After this blonde bombshell got out of jail, she decided to continue her sexploits by making an adult video (Seymore Butts and Shane Meet Kathy Willets: The Naughty Nympho) and starring in her first CD-ROM - Porker Party (opening screen at right).

PC: And how did you handle that?

KW: Well, my immediate reaction was, since the media went nuts and the public was going crazy and we were being bombarded from all sides, that we had better get an attorney...and a good one. So, we went to Ellis Rubin (who is a very well-known Miami attorney with a celebrity verging on notoriety) and hired him. And that was a mistake, since Ellis Rubin drew even more attention to the case and we were really under siege! It kept getting more and more out of hand and I was so embarrassed and humiliated, and was so fearful for what it would do to my family, that instead of holding fast for a trial, I pled out (pleaded guilty), and they gave Jeff 15 months in state prison and me eight months. I am out on early release now.

PC: Do you think this was fair?

KW: Yeah, particularly since not one of the men who was in the so-called "little black book," and they were all alleged customers of mine, has ever been charged with anything. That's the irony of the justice system. I do eight months and my husband does 15 for making a video of me with the mayor which is presently being sold for a lot of money, and the guys whose hands were as dirty as anyone elses, walk. They've released some of the names of some of the city officials and big shots so far, but they haven't released them all. But one day, I'll release every one of them. I can't do so now because I'm on parole, but someday...

PC: And what is your life like today?

KW: Well, it's pretty terrific, except when I come to Florida to appear in a nightclub (Kathy is now a dancer on the circuit and does appearances all over the country) I am immediately arrested for a violation of parole. So that's tough. They wait for me and as soon as I

While the production values of the videotape used as evidence in Kathy Willets' prostitution case were amateurish and out of focus (sorry, Jeff), that's certainly not the case with the Poker Party CD-ROM. The folks at Digital Video Productions have gone to great lengths to create the feeling of being right across the table from Kathy. And, if you play your cards right, you can see every freckle on this busty blonde's beautiful body.

The game is easy enough to install as long as you follow the provided instructions and have the required 8Mb RAM. It should go without saying that the faster your machine, the better the program will run. The program will create an icon in Windows and will take up about 345 KB of your hard drive.

Once you have installed Poker Party you will have the option of selecting from five other pretty poker players besides Kathy. By clicking once on the photo of a player, she will introduce herself and tell you a little about herself. Let's meet the contestants, shall we? Cory Flowers is the bespectacled blonde on Kathy Willets left. "Let's see if you can get me out of this business suit and into my birthday suit," she says. Brooke Rivers is on Kathy's right. Brooke is another South Florida girl, raised in West Palm Beach. This beautiful brunette tells us that she likes games, especially pool. Candy Graham is the well-built biker babe in the lower left hand square. Candy loves the way a Harley "vibrates between my legs." In the bottom middle square is Crystal Champagne, a robust blonde who loves bareback riding. That brings us to Ashley Phillips in the bottom right square. Ashley is a college student who like to do "everything topless."

Once you have selected your opponent, the only other thing you need to know is how to play poker. Although some computer users may not see poker as challenging as the first level of DOOM, you don't have to be an avid card player to appreciate how a small straight can still make a woman take off her panties.

The only drawback to this game is that you have to beat your opponent out of a set amount of money each time in order to get her to take off one article of clothing. We don't recommend cheating in real poker, but if you're looking for a fast way to see more of Kathy or one of the other models in the buff, you may want to find the hidden options menu in the upper left hand corner and lower the stakes to $100. One other piece of advice we can give you is not to try and clean these women out all at once if you have a good hand. Greed will get you nowhere while sandbagging; betting low with a sure winning hand will certainly reap higher stakes.

The only other tip we can give you is that before you sit down for an evening of sexy fun with "America's Favorite Nymphomaniac," check all the closets just make sure you're not being videotaped.

begin doing my act, I'm busted. I can't explain why I am such a target except for the fact that I embarrassed a lot of public officials who I thought were friends of mine.

PC: From the sound of things, you intend to embarrass a lot more of them someday.

KW: Yes, I certainly do. Wait and see who else is in the little black book.

PC: Well, since you're now a very well-known celebrity, certainly in this neck of the woods, how do you like it?

KW: There are parts of being a celebrity that I enjoy. I like being recognized and I like talking to open, honest and open-minded people, but there are a lot of conservative nuts out there. However, I enjoy what I am doing.

PC: And what you are doing are personal appearances, and you've begun doing adult films, right?

KW: Yes, I do both and I really enjoy it. I have a very open attitude. I am willing to explore anything and everything. I feel that this society would be in a lot less trouble if we were all a lot more open and honest about who we are and what we like and what attracts us, in bed and out.

PC: Speaking about your career, the reason we're featuring you in Adult PC Guide is because of your CD-ROM game called "Strip Poker." Tell us about that. How did this come about?

KW: Well, having been a business woman, and following what's going on in the computer world, particularly with the Internet and all of the CD-ROM games, I thought that it would be fun to be involved in something like this. And since I have name recognition, I thought it would be lucrative as well. I am not sure whether we contacted the producer of the CD-ROM or whether he came to us, but we got together and did the game and I enjoyed doing it. I think it is great that people who know me can buy the game and people who have heard of me can get a hold of a game that has me participating in it. Although we have no immediate plans to do another one, I think that the whole world of Cyberspace is fascinating and I am sure there are other ways to participate in it...when I get the time. Perhaps even do a sex advice piece on the Internet or something like that.

PC: After all of your experiences, Kathy, what is your current atttude about sex?

KW: I have learned to have a very open attitude about sex. I believe that everyone should be honest about what they like and what they want to do in bed, and then go for it. I think you're missing something if you don't explore your sexuality and take advantage of everything that you want to do while you can. I don't think people are honest enough. They play games with each other and never get really to the point where they can fulfill their fantasies.

In my case, I just wish I had not been quite so open and willing. I didn't give enough thought to what I was doing and had no idea that I was going to get into the trouble I got into by just doing what I wanted to do, which was to experiment sexually with whomever I chose. I never intended to hurt my family, for instance. And the reason I pled guilty, against the advice of my attorney, was to avoid a trial and all of that additional horrible publicity, which I didn't want for myself and certainly not for my family.

PC: You've been called "America's Favorite Nymphomaniac" in the media. How do you respond? Are you a nymphomaniac?

KW: Yes, I am, I guess. At least I became one. When I began being very sexually free, I began liking it more and more and to the point where I had no desire to stop. It was like an addiction and I really love sex and think that it is great and fun and healthy and, yes, I would say I am a nymphomaniac.

PC: And what do you do about it?

KW: Well, making adult videos takes care of all of my sexual drive. I can have sex all the time now with a lot of different partners and it is great. It definitely satisfies my sexual rges. So, I go to bed with other men, and women, all the time. And that's more acceptable, for some reason, than the way I was doing it before. Actually, what I was doing before was okay with everyone too until some men got caught and embarrassed and now they have decided to get even.

PC: And what about your relationship with Jeff, your husband?

KW: Well, in the beginning, it was rough because of all of the pressure and the hysteria and the fear, but we decided that we could either call it quits and go our own way, or stick around and try to work things out. And we decided to weather this together. Today our relationship is great. When the pressures get to be too great and we start to get uptight and grouchy with each other, we get away...not as often as we'd like, but we do get away. It's hard to relax here in Florida because everywhere we go, we are recognized and the media and the public get in our faces, so we escape to Bermuda or the Bahamas or wherever for quiet times.

PC: If you had all of this to do ver?

KW: I'd rethink it. I certainly hated the publicity and the humiliation, but things are workng out.

PC: What about Kathy's future?

PW: I know that I cannot continue doing what I am doing now for too long, so I am working as hard as I can to make as much money as I can so that in a couple of years when the big parade is over, I will be financially secure and able to do whatever I want to do. The positive side of all of this is that I am making more money than I ever did or could hope to make on the stock market. I am being approached all the time for new ventures, and some of them are good ideas. I think living well is the best revenge for what hap pened to me and I am glad I was able to turn a really traumatic experience into something positive.

PC: Any advice for our readers out there?

KW: Yes, don't look down on people you don't understand. And the adult industry is what you make it. Let's face it, the adult industry wouldn't be the tremendous success it is if there weren't millions of people out there who support it. And look what's happening with the adult material on the Internet. There are so many people who want to see and view and participate in adult sub jects and material that the government is getting increasingly alarmed by it. It just goes to show you that in spite of the fact that a lot of people think this country is uptight and conservative and anti-porn, there are a lot of them participating in sex...like 100 percent of all the adults in the country. So, my only advice is to get honest with yourselves and stop pretending you are something you're not. Life can be fun if you let yourself go once in awhile.

SURF'S UP NEWB!

ARTICLE BY ROBERT LASSITER

ILLUSTRATION BY OTIS SWEAT

If you're a newbie who doesn't know his baud from his board, then this guide to surfing the Internet will get you on your feet and riding the biggest wave in computers.

The "Internet." "The Information Super Highway." " The 'I' Way." These are all terms that invoke visions of a true mega-global community with the image of George Orwell's Big Brother peering at us from the inside of our computer monitors. Well, the Orwellian vision of the future is no longer an abstract fiction. It's here! And now the question, for many of us not yet tuned into what seems to be an impossibly complex information and communications system is: what do we need to do to gain entrance to this fascinating world of the future. No, the present!

What is the Internet? What can it do for us? What computer equipment and programs do we need? How can we get on line? Once on line, how do we move around and what can we do ?

The waves of questions and information to be waded through can seem overwhelming and intimidating for any newbie (Internet novice). But if you know the basics you can learn to ride the Internet with the big kahunas. So grab your keyboard and let s go!

Anyone who surfs, whether on water or by computer, will tell you that the first step in riding a wave is understanding what makes it possible.

The Internet is a collection of networks spanning the globe. These networks are simply computers connected to computers connected to computers. Originally, the primary users of all of these computer connections were government agencies and research facilities with a need to exchange information and communicate back and forth. Today, commercial access and public participation in this information super highway is growing by leaps and bounds. As a matter of fact, there's a computer-generated communications explosion that is truly awesome!

Major communications services, such as Prodigy, CompuServe and America On Line are extending their existing services to provide Internet access. There are also literally thousands of Internet access providers sprouting up every day. So, the good word for novices is, getting on-line to the Internet has never been easier or more affordable.

Once you have a basic grasp of how the Net works, you're ready to learn how to stand up and ride it. Of course, you can't ride anything without the proper equipment.

Just as wave riders use longboards and shortboards based on their exerience, you should make sure your computer fits your skill level for surfing the Internet.

The first thing you'll need is a computer. You'll be running a graphical user interface operating system such as Windows or OS/2, and similar software, (and if you're a real newbie who doesn't know what that means, don't worry about it. Ask your computer salesman who can explain it all to you). So you'll need a PC with a 486 or Pentium chip installed, a mouse, a fast hard drive, and plenty of RAM (random access memory). Don t skimp here, you'll need 8MB minimum, 16 - 20 preferred. You'll also want a fast modem (V.32 speed) as well. Finally, you'll want a good video system consisting of a 14 or 15 inch monitor and a video card with 1 or 2 MB RAM on board. As another peripheral component, you may want a sound card and speakers.This will give you the added bonus of sound while you surf .

Once you have everything in place and installed to give you the sights and sounds of the Internet you'll need to find a place to jump in and start paddling.

That's why you'll need an access provider. This is a service that will allow you to connect to their computer and access the Internet via their network connection. Now, you might ask yourself why you need to subscribe to a service, or access provider? Well, if you have a zillion dollars, you can access the Internet directly, but be advised that this is an extremely complicated and, more importantly, an extremely costly way to go. We are talking around $15,000 bucks a year to lease a number of phone lines, a minimum investment of $5,000 in equipment and then perhaps $50,000 a year to hire a technician to constantly maintain the system.

The online services have already made that investment and are now able to provide you with the ability to access the Internet through their connections. It's a lot like having a friend let you surf in waters that might be someone's else's territory or part of a private beach.

You can get Internet access from most of the larger on line services such as Delphi (800- 695-4005), CompuServe ( 800-240-4782 ), Prodigy (800 PRODIGY ), and AOL ( 800-261- 6611 ). The difference between these services and the ones listed previously, is basically the difference between a strip mall and a huge shopping center. These larger services can provide you the added benefit of extra services, dedicated support and discussion forums, etc. as well as Internet services. In addition, these services make getting on line fast and easy. The providers listed above, however, will be selling you SLIP or PPP access. SLIP stands for serial line Internet protocol and PPP stands for Point to Point Protocol.These protocols are fast, efficient means of becoming directly connected to the Internet, but can be a little difficult to configure and establish.

If you use one of the services listed first, or one providing SLIP or PPP access, you'll need some specific software to run some of the Internet navigating programs. These programs, such as FTP, TELNET and WWW act as fins and help you retrieve files, log onto other networks systems and surf the net in general.

For the purpose of this article, we reviewed Netmanage s product named Chameleon which gives you a tremendous bang for your buck. This product comes with all the necessary tools for navigating the Internet. This article briefly describes what these programs do, but for a fuller discussion, refer to the manual that comes with the product.

FTP stands for file transfer protocol. The product that comes with Chameleon is a real power tool compared to its text based version, sort of a power boat compared to a wind surfer.

When you run the program, you connect to other computer systems, and then see a window similar to Windows File Manager. You'll see a section that details your local hard drive, and a section that details the remote directory. To get a file from a remote location, you simply point to it, and drag it to your side.

WWW stands for the World Wide Web and this is the latest in Internet navigation technology. WWW is a document based tool and you access it using a web browser. The web browser allows you to read a document consisting of links pointing to other documents located on the host machine, or located on other machines. As you read the document, you'll notice some of the text is highlighted, underlined, or is set aside in the color blue, depending on the browser you have accessed. By pointing to this highlighted text and clicking on it, you signal the browser to move to the location of the document and read it into your browser. This special type of document is known as hypertext and allows you to read something in a non-linear fashion.

The link is known as an URL, or Uniform Resource Locator. This is a specific way to address a document at a given location. You'll see lots of these. The documents, by the way, don t have to be documents as we commonly know them. They can be picture images, sounds, files, or programs. If you see something like mail to: somewhere@someplace.net( this should be blue) when you point to and click, the mail program will be activated with "send to" filled out to somewhere@someplace.net. So you see, they really have put all of this together in a very clever way that allows you to jump around from one computer to the next, without having to know all the cryptic commands that used to be required.

Installing Internet Chameleon is pretty simple. While running Windows, select File Run from the main menu and enter a:setup.exe in the command window (assuming you have the disk in drive a:\ .)

Follow the installation prompts, inserting the requested disks, and entering the serial number located in the manual. The installation procedure creates a program group called Internet Chameleon. If you have your own Internet access provider, now is the time to run the program Custom Connect. This can be sort of complex, so make sure to keep the manual handy. You'll have to know the domain name of your provider as well as their IP address. You will also need to know how to login and record those setting in the SLIP.INI file under your connection name. Since all this can be a bit of trouble for a novice, you will appreciate how Netmanage has automated all of this procedure.

You can take advantage of this automation by opting for the icon that has the title "Instant Internet - Click to Start." You should see a tabbed dialog box that offers you a few Internet access providers. You'll need a credit card (some don t take AMEX, depending on the service provider).

At the bottom of the Select Internet Provider dialog box, you'll see a button titled ' more info' Using your mouse, press this button to view the readme file that will describe service rules and access cost. You can press the tab on the top to select a specific provider. Once you have decided on a provider, press the button titled ' signup '. Enter the information requested and select the send option. This will dial a dedicated telephone number (you're not on the Internet yet) and will transmit your billing information to the service provider.

You will probably be given some more information to approve, such as specific sign-up arrangements. Once you agree to the terms, the system will record all the necessary information to a file named TCPIP.CFG in the Netmanage subdirectory on your computer. (This also saves you about three days worth of configuration woes an obvious bonus if you're not capable of setting this up yourself.)

And again, don't be embarrassed if you don't feel you're capable of doing so. It takes a lot of practice to become a pro, nobody does it overnight. Pros are made, not born and you're going to get an education once you're on the Internet. Make sure you record your user name and password which is provided to you. Restart your system and you're ready to go.

Once your system has restarted, open the Internet Chameleon window and run the program titled Custom - Connect Here. This program reads the TCPIP.CFG file you created earlier and knows the number to dial, how to sign on and all the other details about getting on line. A word here about modems. You must have a modem to connect to the Internet (for the types of access we are discussing here ). A modem is a device that changes the text and commands that you interact with on your computer into information that can be sent through a phone line, and changes it back on the other end so the host computer understands you. The instant Internet program you ran in before should have configured your modem for you. Press the connect menu option and the system will dial your provider. Once the connection has been established, you'll run probably want to jump straight to the web browser. Okay, newbies, are you ready to surf?

In the Internet Chameleon program group you'll see a program icon titled 'Web Surfer , this is your surf board.Activate it by pointing to it and double clicking the mouse button. Your startup document, or URL will be one provided to you via your access provider. URLs typically show you a menu of items, one of which should be an Internet exploration guide. Point that menu and follow along. If you pay attention to the URLs you may notice that you travel quite a distance in a short period of time. You can transfer from the USA to China for instance, in seconds (and, no long distance charges apply!).

You should play around a bit so you can get comfortable with the program. You can point to a location by selecting the menu item Retrieve | Goto URL , and entering the URL in the text box. Try it now entering the following command : http://www.shadow.net/~dugent

You should have found the home page of Dugent Publishing Corp., the company that puts Adult PC Guide together.

Surfers have always had their own special lingo and computer surfers are no different. While trying to provide every term would be impossible we've put together a hot list to help you get understand and fit in better.

@ - The type written symbol for the word "at." This symbol is used to help distinguish the service provider in a computer address such as dugent@shadow.net.

address - Internet users have addresses that identify them and let others know where to reach them. An address is made up of the computer users name and the service provider's name. For example, dugent@shadow.net tells you that Dugent Publishing Corp.'s Internet service is provided by a company called Shadownet.

baud - A unit of measure referring to modems. The number of bauds in a modem indicates the number of transitions in a modem signal per second.

BBS - The abbreviation for bulletin board system. A BBS is an electronic version of the corkboard variety and is used for the same reason, to look at and send messages to other people.

binary file - A file which contains numbers and characters as well as information. Pictures, sounds and spreadsheets are the most commonly used binary files.

bit - The smallest common denominator of computer data. A bit is a unit of measure. Bits form bytes and bytes form words.

bitmap - A picture made up of millions of bits.

bps - Bits per second. This measurement is used to describe the rate information is sent over a modem.

burp - An interruption in a computer program.

crash - Pray you don't need this definition. It means your computer has suddenly failed.

There are many search programs on the Internet that can find Web pages for you. Some of these search engines keep an index of directories available and update them frequently. Below are some of the most popular index sites :

As a newbie, you probably won't be aware of some of the hotest spots to surf. So the list below might be of interest.

These are but a few of the thousands of listings growing in number each day. This should be sufficient to get you started though because each site may very well point to other sites.

If you want to be up to date and informed on all of this, there are also newsgroups available. Newsgroups are just that, forums that focus on a specific topic and promotes exchanging of dialog between participates. Netmanage Chameleon s NewtNews program is what you'll use to access the news groups. you'll start the program by pointing to it with your mouse and double clicking. When NewtNews begins, it will determine that you have not subscribed to any news groups and will ask if you want to build a list. You should answer OK even though it will take a minute or two ( the entire list is huge ). From there you can subscribe to as many as you want Once you ve selected the newgroups you want to read, save the configuration and NewtNews will recall those groups every time run the program. Of course you'll want to update the article counts frequently. While reading news groups, you can correspond to articles directly, or reply to the author via mail.

Obviously, you'll want to know where the newsgroups dealing with sex can be found, so here is a partial listing:

CONNECT

If you're finding it hard to access the alt.sex newsgroups. and you're really looking for sexy alternatives on the Net, then you may want to link up with some of these hot, new destinations.

Attempting to find and report on the hottest sites on the Internet for adult material today is a bit like trying to find a needle in...well, in a stack of needles. Browsing the thousands of sites alone can involve mind-numbing hours of surfing, wrist-breaking tedium of button clicking, and still you might not find the latest, hottest and most novel sites since they are so widely dispersed and scattered.

However, don't be daunted by the the quest. Most of the time, patience and fortitude are rewarded with erotic stimulae. To help you get started here, is a brief list of several interesting places to visit the next time you are looking for excitement.

Most adult material seekers will agree that some of the hottest spots on the Internet today are the World Wide Webb pages of Playboy and Penthouse magazines. For the most part, adult magazines have been noticeably absent from the (WWW) World Wide Web. but the recent addition of these two giants may mean it won't be long before you can access many other men's magazines.

Pets and Bunnies

Playboy can be accessed through your favorite web browser at http://www.playboy.com. It's a fairly popular site with about 800,000 web access a day but the response time is still pretty good. There are pictures, of course, but most are fairly tame in relation to other stops along the net.

The purpose of this sight is to whet your appetite enough so that you will want to subscribe to the magazine and Playboy uses some very good bait.

Penthouse can be reached at http://www.penthouse.com and is not as fast as the Playboy site. The official word is that Penthouse is accessed more often than Playboy, but a guess says that Hugh's magazine probably has more phone connections. The Penthouse photos are crisp and clear but neither Penthouse nor Playboy has very provocative pictures. If you plan to visit either site, try for an off-peak time, like very early morning. Both sites tend to get extremely busy in the evening.

If you are looking for some more offbeat offerings which could lead to orgasm, then you may want to check out the following list of WWW sites. There are no promises that all of these sites are still accessible, but you should be able to find one or two that will tickle your sexual taste buds. buds. Adult oriented web pages tend to come and go. As soon as word gets around about a good site, it's closed down. Not because of content, but because of high traffic.

Lingering Over Lingerie

http://sashimi.wwa.com/~notime/gands/romance/main.html is the web address for Romance Elegant Lingerie and Keepsake Gifts. As the name implies, they sell lingerie online. They have a fairly comprehensive collection of lingerie, modeled by attractive women. The pictures are good quality.

Arizona's Hot Spot

http://www.cyberspace.com/pt/pt_ home. html is one of the more interesting sites on the net. It's apparently put together by some "professional" ladies in Arizona. They give detailed descriptions of themselves and even provide a price list. They go under the guise of "Exotic Dancers" but as they say in their home pages: "No, we don't dance. Yes, we go all the way." No pictures but it's a great conversation piece when your buddies drop by and want to know what you can do on the Internet.

Skin Flick Files

http://xmission.com/~legalize/asm.html is another interesting conversation page. It's the official home page of the Alt.Sex.Movies user group. If you're interested in what actress did what in which adult movie, this is the site for you. There's information on almost every adult movie of recent time and links to more information on the adult movie industry.

Don't Forget Your Rubbers!

http://ww.ag.com:101/Condom/Country/homepage?12345678901234567890123456789012440138" is the address for Condom Country. Yes, that's the real address, straight off our bookmark file. They sell condoms, of course: not just your garden variety but every kind and color of condom ever conceived. They ship by mail order so the service is discreet. If you've got a hankering for a giant-sized, glow in the dark, tartan plaid, reservoir-tipped condom, Condom Country is the place for you. If it's too much trouble to type in the address, go to Yahoo and look for Business:Sex. While we're on the subject of Yahoo, it's probably the best repository for Internet addresses for almost everything. Go to http://akebono.stanford.edu/Yahoo. Try searching for anything to do with sex and you'll get more addresses than you could look at in a week.

Nude Reviews

http://www.access. digex.net/-ldgrim /inro.html is the address of the Grimace Nudie Bar Listing. It's a compilation of user reviews about almost every strip cub in America. The type of dancing, the bar service, the friendliness of the dancers and the cover charge are just some of the notes on individual clubs. Go look and see if your favorite strip club is listed. It's invaluable as a guide to the educational offerings of cities that you plan to visit.

What's the "best" club? Mons Venus in Tampa.

Phone Rest

http:/gate.net/~pillow is the home page for PillowTell. They sell prepaid phone sex cards. Each card gives you a number of minutes with the fantasy object of your choice and has a picture of a pretty girl on it. Most of the cards are geared for collectors and are issued in limited numbers.

French Tranlation

http:cnam.fr/bin.html/imageWWW is the address for a private collection of semi-nude photos. "Femmes Femmes Femmes je vous aime" is the title. Any guesses on the country of origin. This site has been a bit hard to access of late and seems to come and go, but if you luck onto it, you'll enjoy the classy nudes.

Uplifting Experience

http://ama.caltech. edu/~mrm /body.html is not an adult site per se. It's the Official Female Body Builder page and sports photos of some of the most attractive weight lifters in America. If you prefer a woman who can beat the hell out of a mugger, here's the spot for you.

French Maidens, We, We

http://www.labri.u-bordeaux.fr/~paries/Image/GIRLS/GIRLS.html is in France but it's only a local call to your Internet provider. The title on the home page is "Girls' and that's exactly what it is. No attempt is made at redeeming social values. It's a collection of images of pretty girls. Life should be so simple, n'cest pas?

All She Wants To Do Is Have Some Fun

http://www.vs1.ist.ucf.edu/~kendall/fenn.html defies description. It's a cybervisit to Sherilyn Fenn's life. You can wander around in her apartment. Go into the bathroom and see if she's masturbating. No, I'm not kidding.

Cintra of Confusion

http://sfgate.com/examiner/daily/950111/cintrahome.html is a look in Cintra's x-rated fantasies. If you don't know who Cintra is or why you should care about her fantasies, you're not alone. Every good Internet Surfer should go just because it is there.

The Science of Sex

http://www.mcs.com/~rune/sexresearch.html is for those scientifically minded individuals who need a reason to think about sex. It's everything you ever wanted to know about sex research. Well, almost. There's no mention of how to apply to be a volunteer subject.

Striptease

http://www.gate.net/~vidwiz is an advertisement for an upcoming service devoted to the strip club industry. Apparently, the place to go in Van Nuys, California is "Bob's Classy Ladies".

X Marks the Spot

http://www.teleport.com/-kaymilt is one of a growing set of individual home pages for pretty ladies. This one belongs to Madame X. If you don't know who Madame X is, you haven't been looking at Gifs long enough.

Danni Ashe also has a web page but it's devoted to an explanation of why she no longer has naked pictures online. Seems she saturated her Internet provider. Anyone who has ever seen Danni's chest will understand how easy that must have been for her.

Sugar and Spice

http;//www.gold.net:80/users/av73/ is Mrs. Silks magazine for cross dressers. There are articles about getting in touch with your feminine side, plenty of pictures of Mrs. Silk socializing with her like-minded friends. Mrs. Silk also talks about her "training days" and quite a few videos. Could this be some sort of home-help employment agency? There seems to be much talk about "discipline" and "maids." Anyway, it's worth a look, see, read.

Binary Stars

The hot user groups are still A.B.P.E., or Alternate.Binaries.-Pictures.Erotica. If you have a new group reader, link to it. You'll get nude, including some fairly hard core images on a regular basis. Every now and then, Danni Ashe posts some pictures of herself. There are a few upstart challengers to A.B.P.E., like: Alternate.Binaries.Pictures.Erotica.-Orientals or Alternate. Binaries.-Pictures.Erotica.Female but ABPE is still the best.

Remember, there are no guarantees that by the time you read this, all of the above listings will still be there. Rest assured, though, that by the next issue of Adult PC Guide, there'll be another batch of new material buzzing about and we'll do our best to find it and let you know about it.

High -powered RAM, Thruster joysticks and computer simulated sex. Welcome to the adult world of CD-ROMs!

While a lot of adult computer users may already know about RAM and all that other technical stuff, we've gone to great lengths to try and make this section of CD-ROM reviews easy to understand for everyone, whether you're thinking about buying a computer or you already own one.

Striking a balance between computer information and erotic content in CD-ROM reviews is not easy, because not every computer user has the same system, the same technical knowledge or the same sexual tastes. Contrary to some beliefs, you don't have to be a computer whiz to enjoy adult CD-ROM material, and you don't have to have a high-powered PC to run adult discs. When it comes right down to it, the only real skill the average computer owner has to have is the ability to read and follow instructions.

Along with each synopsis of these CD-ROMs, we've included an information box that should answer most of your questions. In the box next to the CD-ROM cover you'll find the name of the CD-ROM, its format ( video, interactive, photo disc, etc.), sexual themes, the name of the company that produced it and the minimum system requirements (or MSR) needed to run that particular CD-ROM.

If you have a computer and you want to know whether a game you're interested in will play on your system, simply see if the numbers in the MSR section of the disc's box match your computer's parameters.

In order to give you a better indication of how your computer may react with each CD-ROM, here are the specs of the system on which they were tested by Adult PC Guide: 486DX/ 66 Mhz, with 8 Mb RAM, a SVGA 256 color monitor, Sound Blaster 16 sound card and a Creative 2X CD-ROM drive. Comparing how the game ran on our system and how your system compares to ours, you can get a pretty clear picture as to how each CD-ROM will function for you.

As for the criteria used to judge these CD-ROMs, only factors common to all CD-ROMs were taken into account: things like installation process, picture resolution, consistency of action, options, sound and, of course, sexual content. These common denominators help level the playing field between interactive games and standard video formats. These are the same types of things you would look at if were buying a new television. Does it hook up easily? Is the picture clear? Does movement flow or is it jerky? What kinds of things will my new TV do? Is the sound clear? Am I hooked up to the Playboy Channel?

If you're looking for a ratings system, you won't find one. Magazines have been using these tired yardsticks for too long. A ratings system only tells the reader what one person with a certain amount of knowledge on a certain system thought of it. If an average computer user, as most reviewers are, takes a high-quality CD-ROM and tries to review it directly from the disc itself to save time, then he may get a few glitches which could affect his rating, whereas a beginner, who follows step-by-step instructions wouldn't have any problems and would have a better critique of the product. The only stars on these CD-ROMs are the celebrities you'll see when you load one of these discs into your computer.

So, whether your a newbie looking for a little nudity, or a computer combat veteran searching for a little R&R at your favorite X-rated destination, this CD-ROM section should serve as a basic guide to help you find what you're looking for.

Black tie functions can be such a bore. The people can be snooty, dinner conversations with strangers are awkward and the food is usually something you wouldn't eat if you were starving. But, that's definitely not the case at this Dinner Party.

Steve Drake is the host for this elegant affair and the guest list included such sexy porn stars as Kylie Ireland, Debi Diamond and Randy West. We don't know much about the menu for this soiree, but we do know you won't find a more friendly crowd of dinner companions or juicier conversation.

When Drake issues a challenge to his dinner guests to reveal their innermost fantasies, the table is set for a heaping helping of hot sex that will satisfy almost any taste.

Each of the eight guests divulges his or her secret desires and you get to see each acted out in live-action video clips. The clips aren't that long, but they are intense and there are 10 of them. And, if you like one theme more than another, you can go back for as many extra helpings as you want.

The main menu for this CD-ROM is set up like a dinner table with each guest's plate containing a video of their fantasy as well as a tasty side dish of 24 stills from that fantasy. Once you select a place setting you have the option of viewing the stills or running the video clip. The only problem with this arrangement is that the plates on the table of the main menu don't give any indication of the fantasy, except for a small picture that is barely discernable. One suggestion is to open up each place setting and see what the fantasy is called and then pick and choose from those that interest you.

Everything on this erotic menu is recommended for your consumption.

The images are crisp and clear and the color is good. Ultimate Interactive even gives you the option of changing the background music for whatever scene you want to watch. Each fantasy has its own corresponding theme music which can be accessed by clicking the music button.

Tracy Adams has made more than 200 appearances in adult video and this latest venture into CD-ROM proves that her appeal is as fresh as it was the first time she stepped in front of a camera.

Tracy may not be as well known as Amber Lynn or some other porn stars but she has been just as active in her 10 years in adult entertainment. Since 1985 Tracy has made hundreds of videos including work on such series as Swedish Erotica, Toppers and Talk Dirty To Me.

While there is certainly enough material for a compilation tape of this sexy superstar's career, unfortunately this CD-ROM isn't it. Tracy Loves You is a collection of five mini-movies with Tracy in the boy/girl finale. Although that might not be a lot for true Tracy fans, they will certainly enjoy her steamy performance in front of a roaring fireplace with her partner's hot poker.

The mini-movies are about average in their resolution and movement. The sound is good and Tracy lives up to her reputation as one of the most popular stars of porn.

BLONDAGE

IBM and PC Compatible

True to its fetish-sounding title, this CD-ROM offers a variety of adventurous pleasures.

Aside from a few subtle references, a drop or two of hot candle wax and some very revealing leather and latex outfits, Blondage has little to do with the fetish scene. However, if you love beautiful, busty, blonde babes who look great in exotic garb and even better in the buff, then this CD is bound to please you.

The pleasure parts of this CD-ROM are all contained in the moments of live-action video with Julia Ann and Janine, (also known as Blondage for obvious hair-color related reasons). This dynamic D-cup duo is on tour and packing them in, as they do in real life, when competing club owner Steve Drake decides to try and break up the pretty pair.

The only pain, you'll feel, and only if you have an unusually low threshold, comes from trying to figure out what you are supposed to do once you choose the room you want to go into. The interactive part of this CD-ROM amounts to getting a computer notebook to open so you can watch the video. Granted, we didn't read the directions, but it took us a few minutes to figure out you have to move the cursor over the room until it turns into a hand, at which point you click to access the video.

Just as with their videos, Vivid means quality. The cover of this CD-ROM is stylishly sexy and the technical aspects of production are impeccable. The graphics and sound are clean and crisp.

PLEASURE ZONES

MAC, IBM and PC compatible

Finding a woman's pleasure zones can be a lot like a game. Play conservatively and you might get past a few more obstacles than other guys. Move fast and take a lot of chances and you could wind up home—alone in front of your computer—playing adult CD-ROMs.

Either way, you're a winner if one of the games you have in your computer is Pleasure Zones.

The object of the game is to use several different items to find the erogenous zones of beautiful porn starlets Raquel Darrien, Janine, Ashlyn Gere and Kelly O'Dell. If you use your lips, hands, a feather, a cherry, a vibrator and your pointer to bring a woman to orgasm, you are rewarded with three full-motion video clips of that model.

The game offers plenty of options. Depending on your expertise with the fairer sex, you can start out as a virgin and work your way through five skill levels all the way up to sex-crazed maniac. The levels do get harder, but none are insurmountable, as long as you are playing on the "She's In Charge" skill level, as we were.

The still images are fantastic and the full-motion video clips, although a little grainy at times, are still above average. The sound is clear and you can hear the sensuality in each porn star's voice as she tries to entice you into finding her erotic spots.

It just goes to prove that art does imitate life because it's a fact that it's the guy who pays the most attention and cares about her needs who always lands the beautiful woman.

LOADS OF FUN 2

MAC, IBM and PC Compatible

If the climax of your adult CD-ROM viewing is the money shot, then you'll want to spend some cash and add this offering to your ejaculation library.

This Loretta Sterling production makes ejaculation the main event and oozes with excitement. The CD-ROM contains over 15 money shots of every various style and consistency. Featured along the way are a veritable melting pot of porn stars humping and pumping to reach the magical moment. Some male faces that you might recognize in the potpourri of spurting pythons are Peter North, Don Fernando and Marc Wallice. The outstanding female players on the receiving team are Viper and Trinity Loren.

Trinity Loren fans will get a double dip of their favorite D-cup model. Trinity appears in back-to-back scenes taken from two different times in her career. The first offers a leaner Loren in a threesome with a man and a woman, while the second flick features a full-figured Trinity.

The title of this CD-ROM may refer to the amount of liquid love you'll be looking at after all those money shots, but it could also have a dual meaning for flesh appreciators. Although most of the women in this video are slender, there are several scenes which feature full-bodied babes taking it on the chin, so to speak.

As for the technical aspects of Loads of Fun 2, there are a few minor glitches that give it a spurting kind of feel at times. Knowing Loretta Sterling's style, this may have been added for effect. There is also a script error that appears if you access the material directly from the disc, but all you need to do is press the continue button and keep going. Overall, though, none of the technical stuff hinders the flow of this ejaculatory epic.

NIGHTWATCH II

IBM, PC and MAC compatible

You and your buxom, blonde partner have been assigned to the nightwatch of an apartment complex in this Sliver-esque CD-ROM, interactive, voyeuristic adventure.

Using your security cameras you can check out what's happening in any of the 14 units, or the grounds, simply by clicking on the desired location. Each location offers you a view of occupants engaged in extra-curricular, sexual activities that are sure to make you want to use your nightstick. Some of the amorous apartment dwellers include Rocco Siffredi with Ona Zee, Lacy Rose and Melanie Moore and Zara Whites and Angela Summers.

But that isn't the interactive part of this CD-ROM. It seems your partner, played by P.J. Sparxxx, gets very aroused when she sees what's going on behind all of those closed doors. If you thought being a security guard was boring, just spend the night with P.J. Along the course of her beat during your watch with her, P.J. will ask you questions that leave no doubt as to her intentions. Your primary goal is to select the right answer and get P.J. to take off her uniform piece by piece. You have to be careful. The boss, Peter North, is lurking nearby and if he catches P.J. naked, he'll punish someone.

This CD-ROM strikes such a good balance between sexual content and interactivity that you'll have a hard time deciding which is more fun: playing or watching. Either way, Nightwatch II rates as one of the best overall adult interactive CD-ROMs. The resolution is good and the movement is fluid.

IMMORAL COMBAT
IBM, PC and MAC compatible

Managing an up-and-coming oil wrestler requires a lot of hard work and patience. And, once you get her a shot at the big time, there is no guarantee that she'll come through for you. Immoral Combat proves that point both in the game and with the CD-ROM itself.

Despite a good premise and a flashy cover featuring some very sexy women, Immoral Combat comes up short, sort of like a flying drop-kick that never reaches it target. And the result is about the same—confusion.

This game is hard to pick up initially, and takes a considerable amount of time to get to any adult material. And, if you are persistent enough to finally get to the live action portions of this CD-ROM, they last about as long as a no-name wrestling opponent of Hulk Hogan's. That's not to mention the sluggish performance of the CD-ROM itself on an 8 Mb system. About the only decent thing this CD-ROM offers is some high-quality stills of the wrestlers, but they are fully clothed, so even that doesn't keep Immoral Combat from deserving a quick three count.

You'll probably work up a sweat playing this CD-ROM, but it won't be the erotically enduced kind you will enjoy.

CHERRY POPPERS
IBM, PC and MAC compatible

If younger women and anal sex make you pop your cork, then this CD-ROM may be right up your alley.

Tammi Ann, Destiny, Veronica and Adriani are four sweet young things who each star in their own homage to anal sex. Tammi Ann gets caught breaking into Tim Lake's place and he makes her pay with some unlawful entry of his own, while Destiny is having fun at a playground when Max shows up and invites her on a real exciting ride. Veronica is a young woman who is having trouble attracting guys (must be an all-girls school,) and so she gets some hands-on advice from her tutor. As for the final scene with Adriani, a glitch prevented us from getting more than the sound.

Despite some below-average resolution which makes images in low light hard to see, this CD-ROM offers long scenes and is as easy to operate as putting a round peg in a round hole. It is also easy to install, but can be accessed directly from the File Manager if you want to save space.

This CD-ROM also provides plenty of options to play with, should you get tired of watching anal sex action. Appropriately enough, it even gives you a hide feature that allows you to secretly stash the screen in case you are interrupted and want to keep your preference for the puckered places out of sight. It also provides a selection of your favorite frames in still picture form in the photos section.

Cherry Poppers provides plenty of penetrating ass action that will make you want to keep putting this CD-ROM in the hole.

VIRTUAL VIXENS

IBM, PC and MAC compatible

Your friend has been imprisoned by the evil Crystal and now you must make the ultimate sacrifice in this sexy science fiction adventure.

Your job? To seduce and sexually satisfy three beautiful women and make them reach orgasm before you do.

This wouldn't be a problem for most men in real life, but Eve, Aria and Katrina are "pleasure matrixes" who require a certain amount of computer skills to make them respond. You need a deft stroke and must use just the right sequence of moves to drive these digitized babes wild. You must also completely satisfy each woman before you can gain access to the next.

Unlike a lot of CD-ROMs that claim to be "fully interactive," Virtual Vixens lives up to the promise with controls that allow you to touch, remove clothing and use your virtual penis to pleasure each one of these wanton cyberbabes.

The game can be a bit difficult to manipulate at first, but a help manual is provided that gives you all the information you'll need to stimulate your first virtual vixen. Of course, half the fun of this game is the trial and error of discovering what series of touches and strokes makes each woman purr.

Virtual Vixens combines all of the elements which make any interactive CD-ROM worth playing. It has crisp 3D graphics, smooth continuous action, clear sound, sexy, seductive women and a good science fiction plot. You'll definitely want to beam into this game over and over again.

The only loser in this game is the friend you're supposed to save. You'll get so caught up in trying to satisfy these vixens that you'll virtually forget why you're there to begin with.

LOVE BITES

MAC, PC and NEC compatible

Mix a couple of chapters of an Anne Rice novel, an issue of Fangora, part of Madonna's "Human Nature" video, a couple of Bela Lugosi horror clips and have the whole thing stirred by a music video director and you might brew up something along the lines of Love Bites.

Love Bites, directed by Phillip Christian, is a fast-paced, well-produced, highly stylized sex music video that features some very gorgeous blood suckers who want to sink their fangs into your flesh. The cast features Fangarina, Shyann, Batricia, Torturella, Madrinne, Natasha, Antionette and Bloodella, all of whom look remarkably good considering they're thousands of years old. No vampire film would be complete without someone bent on destroying the demons. Enter Elsa the Vampire Slayer.

Although concept and cast are compelling, this stylish sexy vamp video lacks substance. You certainly won't bite off more than you can chew if you are looking for a plot: the storyline in this CD-ROM is as transparent as a vampire's reflection at daybreak. The images are alluring and intriguing but are not hypnotic enough to keep your attention for the duration of the CD.

In the end, this movie gets off the ground, but like a creature of the night, wanders in the shadows.

THE BEST OF HOT SHORTS

Seka, Vanessa Del Rio, Nina Hartley, Erica Boyer and Christy Canyon are just a few of the legends of porn that make this one of the hottest compilation tapes produced for CD-ROM.

LBO brings together a veritable who's who of adult entertainment in this collection of ten of the steamiest sex scenes from porn past. Lesbian love fests, copulating couples, two-girl, one guy threesomes and ample anal sex are just a few of the bacchanalian delights offered.

Aside from its star studded cast and potpourri of perversion, The Best of Hot Shorts also offers you a collection of stills of some of your favorite adult celebrities. This voluminous library of hot babes features several Seka photos and all of the photos are of magazine quality.

The visuals are clean and crisp and the movement is fluid in this parade of porn stars. The live action video is substantial and the sound is clear as a bell. This CD-ROM requires you to add an icon to your program manager and can only be accessed from Windows, but when you see the sizzling sex it will make you want to open this window first thing every time.

LBO stands for something else, but here it could be an abbreviation for Legendary Beauties Orgasming. Whatever it stands for, LBO scores big with Hot Shorts.

THE WORLD FAMOUS MUSTANG RANCH

Windows PC

If you're looking for a good time with a prostitute, but you don't want the headaches of STD's or jail , then you really only have two options. The first is to buy a plane ticket to Nevada, the only place in the United States where brothels are legal. Of course, that only eliminates one of the problems.

Your best bet would be to buy this CD-ROM and have the women of the world famous Mustang Ranch entertain you in one of the safest ways possible— interactive sex.

If you have never been to a brothel, legal or otherwise, then this CD-ROM could serve as a prostitution primer. The Mustang Ranch CD-ROM takes you through every step of the process, from picking a filly from the stable to wiping you off after you have finished.

Once you have made your choice of one of the four available females, you are taken back to her room where you can get comfortable. After your date has thoroughly cleaned and checked you out, she starts to ask you questions which allow you to control what happens next, from putting on a condom to how you'd like her to undress. Just as in real life, take things as fast or as slow as you want.

That brings us to the overall feel of this CD-ROM. While you get a realistic view of what goes on in a brothel, it's a lot like seeing a woman take off her dress for the first time and realizing that her body doesn't live up to your fantasy of what you thought she would look like. The women of the Mustang Ranch CD-ROM are nowhere near as good-looking as the ones on television cop shows and they are a lot less playful. K.C. is a prime example. When she is asked why there is so much lubricant on the condom, she answers, 'You trying having sex 12 hours a day.'

The bottom line with this CD-ROM is the same as it is with prostitution: don't set your expectations to high and you'll probably come away satisfied.

SCREW VOLUME 1

IBM and PC compatible

Screw publisher Al Goldstein brings his rag of goodies to CD-ROM.

This Screw debut contains six issues of the sexy scandal sheet. Every issue contains feature articles, photo portfolios, interviews, satire, sex items and everything else that made Screw what it is today—the playground of the sexual revolution.

It's important to point out that this is not a "best of" CD-ROM of your favorite Screw issues. The editions on this disc appear to have been chosen randomly from more recent issues, but all of the material is classic Screw.

This CD-ROM was nominated for best original CD-ROM at the 1995 Adult Video News Awards and for good reason. Volume 1 contains over 500 explicit sexual images, almost a full hour of hot adult video and a database of 1000 businesses that specialize in various forms of adult entertainment, not to mention a custom screen saver of your favorite Screw photos.

Two of the best features of each issue are the interviews and the " Screw You" editorials, each done by Goldstein himself. Al gets down and dirty with Debi Diamond, Viper, Tianna and Tami Monroe in tell-all interviews and rants about everyone from Gloria Steinem to Howard Stern.

All of the still images, a mixture of color and black and white photos, are as clear and crisp as professional photos. The full-motion video clips are a little fuzzy but that doesn't detract from their sizzling content one bit.

If you don't like this CD-ROM or think it's a bit overpriced at $59.95, then "f—k you," as Al would say.

THE INTERACTIVE ADVENTURES OF SEYMORE

PC compatible

Seymour fanatics and fanny fiends alike will want to take this wild interactive ride.

Seymore is on the tail of Brianna (a.k.a. his wife), who he meets on the street. After a brief introduction and a turn-down by Brianna, Seymore goes about his daily life and runs across a bevy of beautiful babes with great behinds. Your job in this interactive adventure is to advise the ambassador of ass about what to do next and what to say in an effort to meet up with Brianna again and win her favor. This CD-ROM is without flaw in production qualities. The sound is so clear that even when a jet roars overhead in the opening screen you can still understand that you're being rejected by Brianna. As for the full-motion video clips, there are over 90 minutes of them, dispersed evenly throughout, so that a good, even flow of action is created. The resolution of the images is crisp and the sex is intense.

A special nod should go to whoever created the highly stylized background of the main menu. The BTV television screen makes operating the game easy and it brings a consistent feeling of fun to the CD-ROM.

The interactivity is above average as adult games go. You make all of the choices for Seymore. You give advice on what to say to women and you help decide what path he travels, almost all of which include some kind of sexual encounter.

The publishers have put together a game to keep your hands busy and your eyes wide open.

ANALVISION VOLUMES 1 & 2
IBM and PC compatible

The main course of this compilation CD-ROM features cabooses, but man does not live by butts alone (unless, of course, we're talking about John "Buttman" Stagliano), so the fine folks at LBO mixed in some other tasty treats to make this a bacchanalian feast.

Both of these CDs feature over 15 different scenes that cater to almost every sexual taste. Each CD-ROM offers a buffet of butts from which to choose, or, you can sample one of the five fellatio scenes. If that doesn't wet your whistle, then wrap your lips around one of the five intercourse dishes, or enjoy a luscious clam feast.

Jessica Foxx and her giant jugs are the primary focus of Volume 1 while titillating Tammi Monroe takes over in Volume 2. Both of these blondes strut their stuff and offer up their asses for your inspection.

As for the technical aspects of these CD-ROMs, both are impeccably put together. Although the screen is a bit on the small side, the images are very clear, the action is continuous and the sound is crisp. You might want to watch how you move your arrow though. These CD-ROMs have extremely sensitive control panels that could cause burps in the flow if you rest the pointer in the wrong place. Play it safe and leave the pointer outside of the program's box. (Sounds like a safe sex commercial, huh?)

In the end, these two videos will help any true butt-man see visions of perfectly round posteriors. Bottoms up.

Whether your enjoy a few scoops of sexy vanilla women, sprinkled by dark, chocolate hunks or just riding the Hershey highway, this CD-ROM offers a combination of bothsure tol make your mouth water.

Adapted from video, this CD-ROM features Sally Layd as a music executive who manipulates a black musician to change his style so that it is more marketable to a younger audience. Sally, who has a speech impediment, struggles a bit with the lengthy dialogue, but she doesn't have any problems using her mouth to play C.J. Bennet's instrument in the opening scene. The video also offers anal action with Sean Michaels and Valeria Fox.

The resolution of this CD-ROM leaves something to be desired and the color fades in and out at times. A major glitch was the inaccessibility of one of the video sections of the CD-ROM. The third section gave us the sound but no picture.

Despite its obvious shortcomings, salt and pepper fans should enjoy the spicy sex in this CD-ROM and anal fans will certainly want to take the plunge.

STRANGE SEX IN STRANGE PLACES

MAC, IBM and PC compatible

You are about to enter a dimension of dark places and tight fits, where the bizarre is familiar and the mundane is inadequate, where carnal encounters occur in unlikely places. You see a signpost up ahead designating a tunnel leading from one unconventional place to another.

You have just crossed over into the—Sphincter Zone.

( Insert eerie, "Twilight Zone"-type music here.)

Knob Swirling is your host for this collage of three campy anal adventures into the darkest reaches of a puckered parallel universe. The first tale features Debi Diamond as a horse trainer who has a crush on her big stud, whose name happens to be Ed. (Need any more hints, Wilbur?) The witty retorts of Big Ed to Debi's questions makes this scene as funny as it is sexy. After a lesbian scene between Debi and groomer Bionca, Big Ed turns into Gerry Pike and demonstrates how Big Ed got his name.

This CD-ROM scores on all fronts, from it's hot buns and awesome anal activities, to its above-average production values. It is strangely funny and erotically wicked. Best of all, you don't have to travel to a parallel dimension to enjoy the strange sensations that this CD-ROM has to offer. You just have to go to your nearest adult video store and ask for it.

FREAK SHOW

IBM and PC compatible

Step right up and witness interesting scenes that, up until now, could probably only be seen in Ripley's Believe It Or Not Museum or the Guiness Book of World Records.

This fascinating tour offers a full menu for fetish fans and those simply fascinated with the unusual. We have Teighlor, the 600-pound mountain of a woman who gets scaled by an adventurous admirer. There is also Viper, a tattooed lady who takes on two men in a scene that will shock and excite you.

For those of you who like a little kink with your pleasure, we also have several fetishy scenes that will leave you tongue-tied. There is a salt and pepper she-male team that is sure to beat anything you've ever seen. There is also a heavy-bellied slave who is at your command.

If we have peaked you curiosity, then simply find the tents on the main screen and pick the scene you want to see first. A few words of caution before you venture into this world of the weird: most of the scenes are better viewed in their natural state. Should you decide to use the full-screen option, you may be a bit disappointed with the resolution quality. Anotherwarning: some of the participants in this parade of porn are foreign and don't speak English, so the sound may be turned off in places.

We think you'll enjoy this voyeuristic view into this bizarre sexual side show.

Fetish fans of this material may not appreciate the title, but they certainly will want to thank the folks at Bacchus for putting it together. Freak Show is a CD-ROM menagerie that should not to be missed. This show is well worth the price of admission!

SAMURAI PERVERT INTERACTIVE

MAC, IBM and PC compatible

This is everything you would expect from Japanese porn-makers: beautiful Geisha girls, above-average production qualities and poor sound dubbing.

That's right, our friends at A6 have put together a great interactive CD-ROM, but still haven't mastered how to make the girls' mouths and words match up. Ultimately, though, a non-synchronous soundtrack can't keep this CD-ROM from making you want to explore the sexual pleasures of the Orient.

Samurai Pervert Interactive puts you in complete control of almost every aspect of this CD-ROM. Aki is your hostess, and she and her friends are very willing to show you a good time. You start by choosing one of three different scenarios. There is a traditional Geisha girl, a business-like babe who wants to please her boss and a lingerie-clad Asian cutie.

Once you have chosen which woman you want, she leads you through your choices of how you want her to please you. You can touch just about any part of her body or skip right to intercourse and choose a position. You can even change the angle at which you are viewing your encounter, from front and behind to top and bottom.

Traditional Geisha girls are highly prized around the world because their only job is to be silent and satisfy their partner's every whim. This CD-ROM certainly accomplishes those tasks. although the silent part is quite by accident.

DOMIN-A-TRICKS

There is no movement in this CD-ROM, but the true submissive should be used to that restriction.

What is allowed is the exploration or your wildest B&D and S&M fantasies through still photos and sound bites. That may leave some fetish fans a little strapped for a good time, but if they hang around and manipulate this CD-ROM in the right manner, they could be in for a lot of painfully fun surprises.

Domin-a-tricks features over 400 pictures with accompanying sound bites that deal with fetishes including S&M, B&D, leg and foot worship, face-sitting, smothering and a host of others. All of the photos are clear and crisp. Once you have a picture on screen, use the arrow to explore all of the possible aspects of that photo. When the arrow turns into a hand, click and you could hear some mistress giving a command.The part of the anatomy on which you place the cursor affects what you hear. For example, if you place it on a breast, you'll probably hear a command having to do with breasts.

There are also "hot spots" in each picture that could take you to some secret place hidden deep in the recesses of this CD-ROM. Exploring all of the fetishes on the main menu is the key to unlocking all of the possibilities of this DOMIN-A-TRICKS.

A few words of caution: the menu heading entitled "miscellaneous," is really a trapdoor that dumps you back into the program manager. Watch your step.

Domin-a-tricks is sure to tie you up for hours of painless, fetish fun.

Bizarre, the famous fetish video company, has moved into the computer age and has published its first CD-ROM. This debut disc is the perfect introduction to Bizarre for adult computer users, because it provides an overview of their entire transvestite and transsexual video library. There are 30 videos titles from which to choose and each gives you stills and a brief synopsis of the video. There is also ordering information in the hopes of intriguing you with such titles as TV Transformation and She Males In Torment.

If you are already familiar with Bizarre and have started your video library, then you may want to use the "star search" option. This feature allows you to enter the name of your favorite she-male and have access to every picture stored on the disc of that particular star.

There are over 200 high-quality photos available for fans of gender-benders, including legendary she- males Shannon and Sulka.

This CD-ROM is easy to load and even easier to use. The controls are very responsive and provide a good slide show simulation. The only downside to this disc is the lack of any full-motion video clips. But don't get your panties in a bunch just yet. Bizarre has always been a leader in fetish material and is probably already at work on its first feature.

GAY MAN'S GUIDE TO SAFE SEX
MAC, IBM and PC and NEC compatible

From the initial attraction to the affects of HIV on a gay relationship, Gay Man's Guide To Safe Sex covers all the bases.

This CD-ROM was produced "by gay men for the well being of gay men" and provides a lot of straight-forward information about safe sex practices in homosexual relationships. The guide has a very professional attitude about its topic and uses gay men to explain about different aspects of relationships and sex. As for the medical information, real doctors provide all of the explanations about how HIV is contracted and how the practice of safe sex can help prevent it.

Along with the message there is also plenty of entertainment. There are six short features involving gay couples with titles such as Rain and The Lovesseat. There is even an S&M-themed fantasy.

Vivid has slickly packaged this product both inside and out. Handsome hunks adorn the CD's cover and the main menu of this application is simple and easy to use. The sound is a little off in places, especially with the handsome host of this CD-ROM, but that doesn't affect the message of this well-produced video.

Vivid deserves a round of applause for this both educational and entertaining guide. In a multimedia world, material such Gay Man's Guide To Safe Sex could be a powerful weapon in the fight against ignorance and AIDS.

One cream-filled, chocolate Long John would be enough to satisfy most women, but apparently, a gay man's appetite requires a bit more. That's why Bacchus put together a buffet of black male twosomes to tempt men who love dark meat.

Black Workout is a collection of four mini movies which feature two well-hung black hunks quasi-copulating. Each scene has a gym-type setting in which one buff black guy is working out and then is joined by another chocolate-covered cutie for a relaxing love session.

Each video has a selection of controls which allow you to manipulate certain aspects of the video, such as the speed and volume. The video clips in this CD-ROM are a bit jerky and the sound is a bit muffled at times, but all in all the content makes the glitches a minor inconvenience. Fans of black gay sex will treasure this CD-ROM simply because this material isn't readily available for computers yet.

BRIEF

Forget flying toasters, some screen savers offer a bevy of beautiful women that will keep your eyes bouncing and your monitor busy.

ENCOUNTERS

One of the primary pieces of software that more and more new computer users are buying first isn't a game and doesn't have anything to do with managing home finances.

The program a lot of new computer users are making their first purchase is a simple screen savers.

A screen saver is a collection of images which pop up when your computer isn't being used. The rotation of the images helps keep your screen in motion, thus saving it from having one image on it constantly and having that image "burned" into the screen. The images of a screen saver rotate in timed intervals on a continuous cycle so that they don't burn into your monitor either. In more simple terms, screen savers make your monitor think that it is busy when you're not using it.

While the function of all screen savers are basically the same, their uses to computer users vary greatly. Screen savers provide helpful reminders for the forgetful, friendly diversions from the daily grind, a brief escape from office woes, a bit of individuality in busy computer networks and an enjoyable working environment.

Perhaps the most important reason consumers buy screen savers though is that these simple programs help personalize computer desktops in much the same way a family photo does.

Although most computers come with preinstalled screen savers that are quite simple to activate and do their job nicely, computer users shell out millions of dollars each year and spend hours tinkering and tweaking just so they can feel more comfortable in their computer environment.

This cottage industry of the computer age has developed into a sort of cyber counter culture of "sippies," screen saver junkies who don't want to conform to the mundane monitor saver and who feel their self expression breathes a certain life into the lifeless.

Some "sippies" have even become so addicted to this computer generated "mind candy" that they add and combine many different elements from many different screen savers to create their own non-toxic escape from reality.

But the appeal of the screen saver has less to do with expressionism and more to do with fun.

Screen saver materials cover a wide variety of topics, from the flying toasters of the classic After Dark software to the comic book characters of the X-Men. There are generic picture programs that offer wildlife and sports and there are screen savers formatted around popular television shows such as Monty Python's Flying Circus, Star Trek and even the all-sports television network ESPN.

And if you are searching for some beautiful bathing beauties to keep your computer company, the following few pages of screen saver reviews should be of special interest.

These products will help keep you and your monitor happy without getting either in trouble with the wife or boss.

Sports Illustrated Swimsuit Calendar

(Softkey, $25)

If you're a man then you have probably seen a copy of the Sports Illustrated swimsuit issue. (It's one of the last magazines with sexy women in it that you can honestly tell your wife you read for the articles.)

The Sports Illustrated Swimsuit Calendar brings to your computer many of the famous models and over 70 of the same high quality photographs that made February SI's top selling month.

Although the primary focus of this product is to let you build your own Sports Illustrated calendar (something no man should be without), the screen saver is worth the time it takes to install the photos from the calendar section.

In Your Face is the name of the screen saver format and it comes with several preinstalled sports images and some simple special effects in case you don't feel like doing a little work to load the babes.

But this easy to use screen saver comes to life when you load the likes of models Elle MacPherson, Kathy Ireland and Rachel Hunter in a sexy slide show.

One drawback to this CD-ROM is that the Sports Illustrated pictures only appear if the disc is in the CD-ROM drive. Otherwise your left with sports photos some less exciting sports such as sailing and golf.

This quality program should satisfy all of your organizational needs as well as let you look at sexy swimsuit models everyday of the year, whether it's on your computer or on your homemade SI calendar.

MSR: Windows 3.1 or higher, MS-DOS 5.0 or higher, 386 processor or higher, 4 Mb RAM (* Mb recommended, CD-ROM drive, SVGA color monitor and Microsoft or compatible mouse.

Hawaiian Tropic Photo Screen Saver

(DTS Desktop Software, $25)

Hawaiian Tropic may make good suntan lotions but, they also know how to work men into a lather with this screen saver.

Everything about this software is hot, from the sexy women (all of whom happen to be finalists and past winners from the Miss Hawaiian Tropic International contest), to the soothing music and tropical scenery.

That's right! If the more than 80 great color photographs of these lovely lotioned ladies doesn't make you feel warm all over, maybe the added instrumentals of gentle guitar music wafting over the airwaves will.

In order to enjoy this screen saver fully you may want to slow down the transition between pictures as much as possible. When the photos of these bathing suit-clad cuties change the music cuts out until the next image appears.

This screen saver gives a few more options to play with than most others. You'll want to open the help file on the main menu to see what option controls what feature so you can better configure the system to suit your tastes.

As for putting together your own personal beach bunnies photo buffet, it's as simple as choosing one or all of the images and finding the drive where you want them deposited.

If you're like most computer users, you probably don't register your software when you get it, but Hawaiian Tropic gives you some incentive to do just that.

Find the icon that says free photo sample and click on it. You should see a 1-800 number and your disc's serial code. Call that number and give them your code. In return, you will receive 10 extra photos.

MSR: Windows 3.1, 386 processor with 4 Mb RAM and 2.8 Mb free hard disk space, CD-ROM drive, a mouse, VGA color monitor and sound card.

Inside Sports

(Desktop Software, $20)

These women may not have the name recognition of Sports Illustrated models or be beauty contest winners, but they will give any collection of computer cuties a run for their screen saver money.

Inside Sports has brought back the traditional calendar girl that used to be found in lockers and garages and put her on a computer screen.

There are 20 months of magnificent bodies, and while other screen savers may make you build your own calendar, the folks at Inside Sports have already put the days of the month on the screen for you.

This particular version of the Inside Sports screen saver covered 1994 and 1995, so if you're just finding out about it you may want to wait for the, updated program

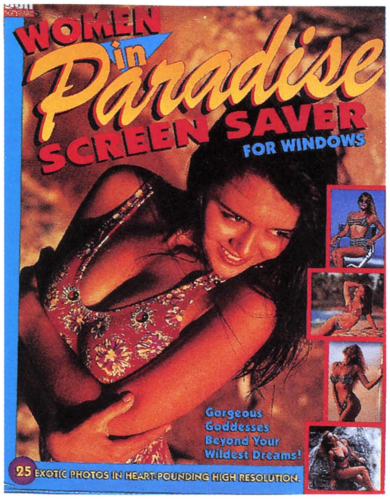
Whether it's built into the system or some sort of minor glitch, purchasers of the hard disk version may encounter an unexpected return to the main screen after several months go by. Don't worry, though: the screen saver takes back over and continues to scroll through all of those beautiful women.

If you don't care what month or year it is and just want to see some revealing photos of pretty women, then you can still use the perpetual calendar and appointment book that is included free.

The appointment book has to be accessed from the file manager. Simply click on "desk.exe" and you have a very basic organizer.

The pictures are very clear and the colors are great. The options panel may take you a few minutes to get accustomed to, but overall this screen saver is a day at bikini beach.

MSR: Windows 3.1 or later and/or DOS 2.2 or later. Windows is not required to run DOS screen saver. 386 processor with 2 Mb RAM and 2.4 Mb free hard disk space with VGA monitor.



WOMEN in Paradise

Gorgeous Goddesses Beyond Your Wildest Dreams!
25 EXOTIC PHOTOS IN HEART-POUNDING HIGH RESOLUTION

Women In Paradise
(DSR Software, $10)

Sand, surf, sex and savings. That could be the motto of the makers of this screen saver.

For roughly half of what most screen savers cost, Women in Paradise has a lot to offer. You get very attractive women in scenic settings and all of the images are top quality.

As a matter of fact, most of the 25 images on this screen saver are so good that they almost look three dimensional at times.

What this screen saver doesn't provide are options. There is no icon created, so you'll have to use your computer's desktop feature (found in the control panel window) to access the material.

Once you find "Women in Paradise" on your screen saver menu, simply click on setup to open the main menu for this program.

Again, there are few options other than wallpaper, special effects and duration of appearance. When it comes right down to it, you really don't need anything other than your desktop feature to run any screen saver. This program may be very basic but it gives you a lot for your money and there aren't any logos on the pictures to give you a commercial feel.

MSR: Windows 3.1 or later, 2 Mb RAM, 3.5 hard disk drive, color VGA monitor, 386 processor and mouse.

One important note; this CD-ROM is a little fickle in the installation process, so be sure you follow the instructions and restart Windows before trying to install it.

With great photographs and Caribbean sounds, Tropical Heat is sure to be one of your favorite screen saver destinations that you'll enjoy visiting again and again.

Computer Piracy

Article by Terry Woodward

PILLAGING AND PLUNDERING FOR PROFIT

Ye olde buccaneers carried swords, wore eye patches and rode the high seas in search of adventure. They had names like Captain Blood and were romanticized because they were charming rogues who believed in honor.

The next generation of pirates proves that there is no honor among thieves. These hi-tech hackers hide in their homes and ride their computers hoping to pilfer information or software for their own gain. They are known by aliases such as Agent Steel and that's exactly what they do– steal! Beware these merciless marauders.

The Buccaneers may have died out in the late 17th century but their counterparts are alive and well in cyberspace.

Today, in the late 20th century, the most common form of piracy is the theft of computer software. This piracy runs the gamut from people simply "borrowing" a copy of a program from a friend or co-worker and copying it into their own PC, to illegally using one program (say, Quark Graphics) to copy into all of the computers in an office network, without authorization and payment to the manufacturer. And this piracy goes on to encompass the millions of illicit copies of Microsoft DOS, Windows, Word Perfect and other programs, not to mention CD ROMs of all kinds, including thousands of adult CD ROM games and features that have been pirated and distributed in the US and foreign lands. No matter what form this piracy takes, it's illegal and it hurts us all.

If we ignore the friend-to-friend program copying and look only at large-scale, for-profit copying, we're looking at piracy that's true to the term. Buccaneers lived outside of the law, motivated by greed. Some person-to-person copying is simply done by individuals who want to forego the expense of buying some of the programs which can run into the hundreds of dollars. These people wouldn't actually be considered hardcore criminals in the literal sense of the word, but they are pirates all the same and they are breaking the law. Today's hard core criminally- intentioned pirates are only slightly less ruthless than their forbearers and, they have far more sophisticated and accessible tools with which to ply their trade. One of the great temptations for many PC owners and actual pirates is that software is easy to copy, easy to conceal, simple to transport, and has high value in relation to its size. Just as in the music and video businesses, software companies lose millions of dollars in revenue each year. And this is where the contention that this piracy hurts us all comes in: The substantial loss of revenue for software manufacturers means that we have to pay higher prices for the software that we honest buyers purchase.

There's a lot of talk these days about software piracy and the Internet. Almost everyone has heard of the infamous, anonymous FTP (File Transfer Protocol) sites with thousands of commercial packages, just waiting for the copying. These sites are the modern day equivalent of the mythical El Dorado, which means that they exist far more in fable than in actual substance. Among Internet surfers, these rumors are the latest urban legend, along with alligators in the sewer and the one-armed rapist at lover's lane. No commercial Internet provider that we could imagine would allow a user to put up such a site. In addition to the risk of losing all of their equipment and being prosecuted once they were identified, the incoming traffic to such an FTP site would quickly bog the provider's system down to the point that no one could access it.

A pirate FTP site, as identified in this popular mythology, would have to be run from a user's private connection. Such a site would rapidly become well known and it would only be a short period of time before the Feds pounced on it.

After all, many more Bulletin Board Systems are being seized by the authorities for software piracy than are caught for carrying forbidden adult material.

The very few pirate FTP sites that actually do exist are short lived. So, by the time you have procured a pirate FTP address, you can almost rest assured that it will be long gone. However, in spite of the expense and risk involved, there are a few pirate sites that still do exist for short periods. Users with an apparent thirst for danger manage to run these sites by taking them up and down at random times and changing the address. They keep their users informed by sending out E-mail announcements about connect times and addresses. Such sites tend to be run, we assume, by adolescent males with a taste for rebellion. Generally, such sites are so short-lived that the time and effort it takes to run them soon outweighs any potential return.

Most of the software piracy that's going on in the Internet is taking place on IRQ. It's a simple matter to go into IRQ and open a channel devoted to swapping software. The operator picks a name for his channel that's known only to a select few. He then tells his friends the name of the channel and arranges a time to meet. Once in IRQ, the user can control who's allowed to enter that channel. IRQ allows transfer of files between users as well as chat. It's a relatively safe way to transfer files. IRQ offers a secure connection between two or more computers on the Internet and is relatively immune from outside monitoring. With FTP or newsgroups, content can be seen by anyone who wanders in. With IRQ, the content is only available for the duration of the time that the two computers are in contact. In addition, there are so many thousands of possible channels in IRQ that it would be impossible to monitor all of them. The only drawback to IRQ is that due to the enormous usage, response time in IRQ has become terribly slow.

The easiest way to swap pirated software is by E-mail. For the most part, it's safe, timely and can be sent and retrieved at each user's convenience. With the advent of readily available encryption programs, it's fairly secure. One can encode the software, give the key to the recipient in another message or by voice and feel comfortable that no one else can decode it. E-mail can get to almost every major online service from AOL to Compuserve and to many bulletin board systems. E-mail accounts for the bulk of all Internet traffic and most of it is as innocuous as a business memo.

We've heard many statements about what the government should do to control Internet usage for private software and even to control such things as kiddie porn. The simple truth is that it's almost impossible to control. There's no way that anyone could examine the billions of bits that flow through the Internet on a daily basis. Not even the largest computer could examine the data stream and search for potential key words. If you were to search for just one key word, like Novell, there are probably tens of thousands of valid occurrences of that word daily. And, since many of the people who are trying to do something illegal would undoubtedly encrypt their files, monitoring would be doomed to fail.

A whole new industry has been developed because of the need for investigating not only computer software and CD ROM piracy, but the burgeoning and very serious practice of electronic spying. So-called "cyber sleuths" are being hired by small and major computer corporations, to both track down and thwart the new super-pirates invading every facet of the Internet. Every day, these cyber gumshoes don headsets and spend hundreds of hours trolling databases for information and hanging out on the Internet using a variety of screen names and communicating with the hackers, crackers and net junkies who spend their nights trolling around bulletin boards, in newsgroups and on chatlines.

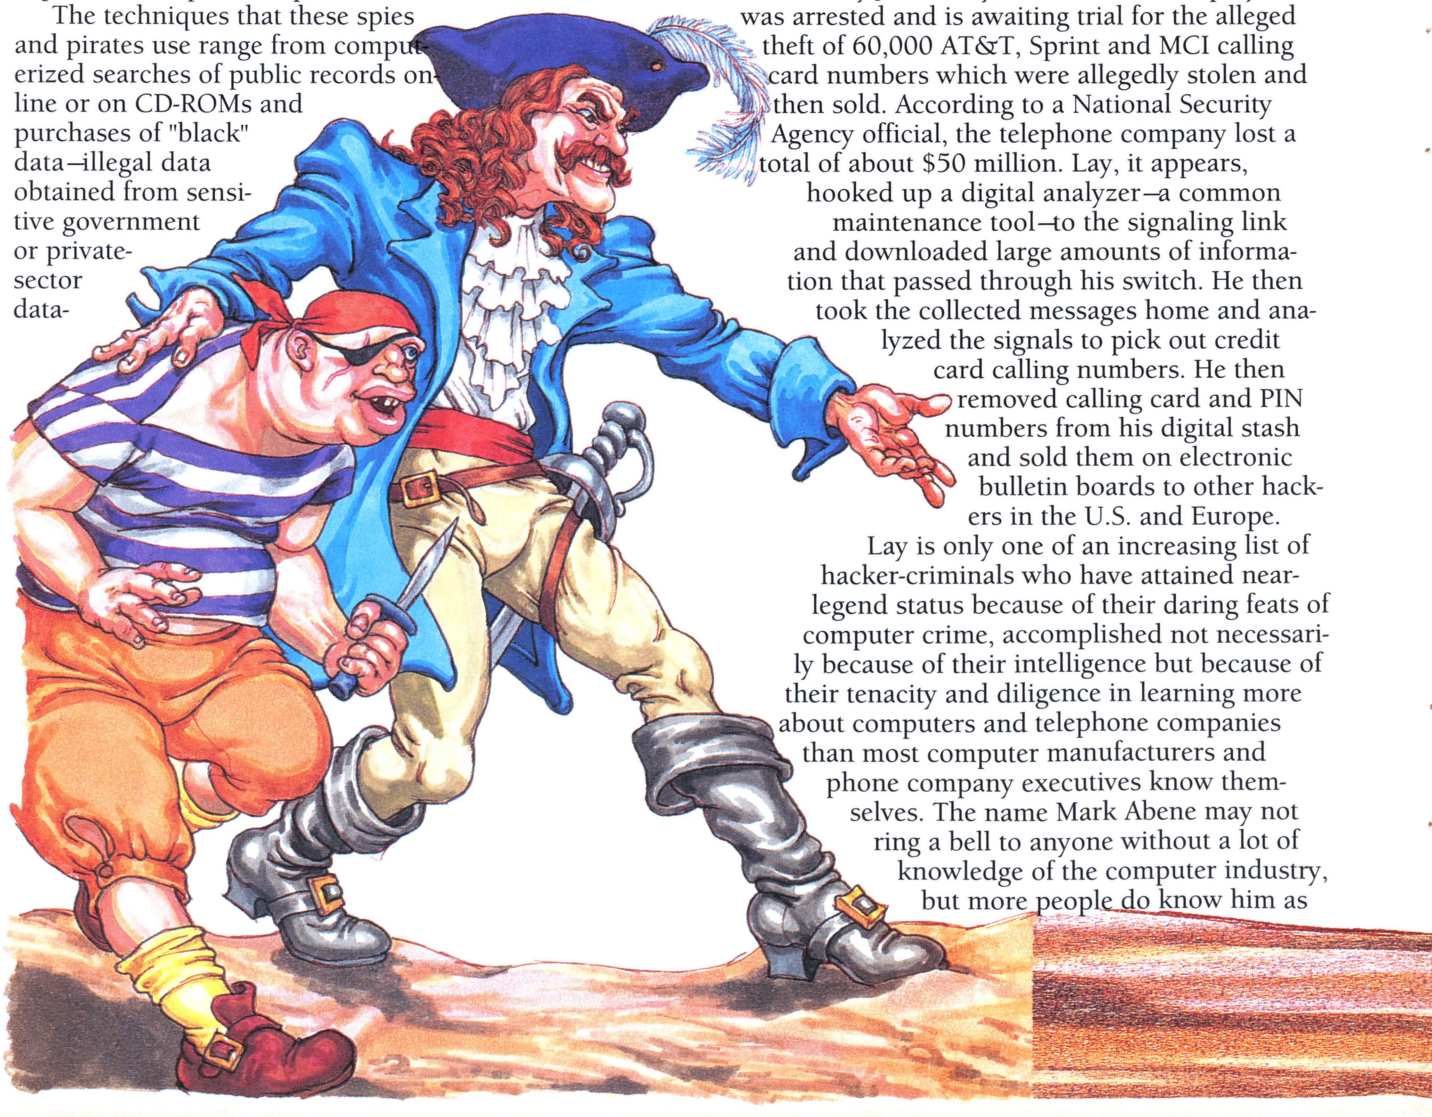
Most software companies also have people who monitor the net looking for people who are trying to hack systems (break into computer networks) and those who try to set up lines for swapping software. Not only do these detectives look for pirates, but also for spies hired by rival companies to collect data on competitors' businesses and on individuals. It is not only the computer industry that has a stake in protective surveillance. More than half of North American corporations report financial losses related to information-security problems. The major "enemies" are competitors, followed by employees, customers, public interest groups, suppliers and foreign governments. Not surprisingly, more and more companies are willing to pay for the services of a good private detective with knowledge of cyberspace and deep-throat sources of information in the computer underground. These electronic detectives are viewed as corporate America's best weapon against the onslaught of technologically sophisticated spies and pirates.

The techniques that these spies and pirates use range from computerized searches of public records online or on CD-ROMs and purchases of "black" data–illegal data obtained from sensitive government or private-sector data-bases–to hacking into computer networks to obtain insider documents. Once these "competitive intelligence" spies have infiltrated your company's network, then anything you have on file is subject to theft, and that includes not only a publishing company's TIFs (photo files stored on computer), but also where that company's bank is, what its lines of credit are, its tax reports, sales tax reports, dollar volume and other confidential information they might want to obtain.

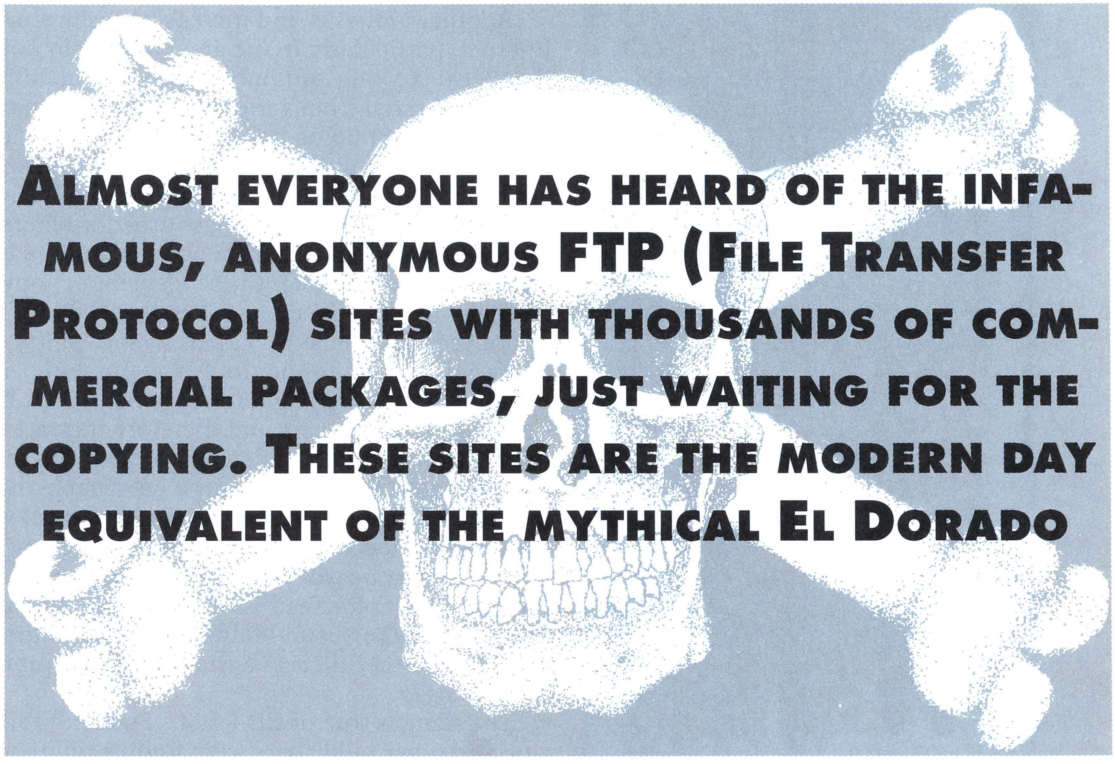
A lot of companies believe that a carefully designed firewall will protect sensitive information on local networks that are connected to the Internet from being compromised. But a number of protective firewalls have been breached, even those of such security-conscious companies such as General Electric. That company had to shut down its computers for 72 hours after hackers broke in through the GEIS systems firewall. Another group, called the Internet Liberation Front, penetrated secure systems at Pipeline Network Inc., a New York Internet service provider, and at Sprint, Pipeline's long-distance provider. Even more disturbing, hackers have been able to collect classified passwords to the U.S. Department of Defense firewall-protected systems, using specially designed "sniffer" software. Computer experts state, however, that the threat to computer system security is always greater from insiders than from outsiders. Even the nation's phone system doesn't appear to be as secure as we assume it is. That system was compromised when a man named Ivy James Lay, a former MCI employee was arrested and is awaiting trial for the alleged theft of 60,000 AT&T, Sprint and MCI calling card numbers which were allegedly stolen and then sold. According to a National Security Agency official, the telephone company lost a total of about $50 million. Lay, it appears, hooked up a digital analyzer–a common maintenance tool–to the signaling link and downloaded large amounts of information that passed through his switch. He then took the collected messages home and analyzed the signals to pick out credit card calling numbers. He then removed calling card and PIN numbers from his digital stash and sold them on electronic bulletin boards to other hackers in the U.S. and Europe.



Lay is only one of an increasing list of hacker-criminals who have attained near-legend status because of their daring feats of computer crime, accomplished not necessarily because of their intelligence but because of their tenacity and diligence in learning more about computers and telephone companies than most computer manufacturers and phone company executives know themselves. The name Mark Abene may not ring a bell to anyone without a lot of knowledge of the computer industry, but more people do know him as

"Phiber Optik," one of the most notorious computer hackers in the U.S. Starting out when the Internet was in its infancy and no one had ever heard of World Wide Web or the Information Superhighway since they weren't even in existence, Phiber has been on the hack and phreak scene for many years. He has served a prison sentence in U.S. Federal Prison in Pennsylvania where he spent a year and a day for his illegal computer-based activities. Phiber claims that he never had criminal intent when he performed any of his activities, but that his attitude on freedom of information and his anti-corporation views were what played a major part in his going to jail. Previous to his arrest, Phiber co-hosted a radio show in New York called "Off the Hook" where he answered questions regarding computers, computer security and the telephone system, advising listener/callers about how to enter commands into a telephone company's switching system to give you touch-tone service for free. He regarded as ridiculous...that the phone company charged you for using your touch-tone phone in addition to the charge for the call itself. He was later a suspect in the massive AT&T telephone crash of 1990 when the phone system went down all across the U.S. At first it was suspected that the millions of dollars worth of damage had been caused by a hacker, and so treasury agents descended on Abene (Phiber) and confiscated his equipment. AT&T eventually admitted that it was a computer error and not the fault of a hacker at all. Later on, however, Phiber was raided again. In December 1991 Phiber said he was awakened by two strangers in his bedroom waving guns in his face. The US Government and the telephone companies were very happy to see him behind bars because they thought that this would stop him from hacking. But it didn't. He was released in November 1994 and is back in business.

Another hacker, a young man named Noah who lives in Vancouver, Washington, found his way into Westinghouse Corp's computer, and the feds went ballistic. Unbeknownst to Noah, Westinghouse has an interest in the nuclear industry. He was just 14 when the U.S. Secret Service raided his house, boxed up his equipment and threatened to send him to jail. The next day, however, they returned and asked him to give them a tour of his hard drive since they apparently didn't have the knowledge to do it themselves. Noah thought this was kind of funny. Although he had no malicious intent then, nor does he now, it's easy to see what a danger hackers can be not only to corporations, but to national security if their intentions are less than honorable.



ALMOST EVERYONE HAS HEARD OF THE INFAMOUS, ANONYMOUS FTP (FILE TRANSFER PROTOCOL) SITES WITH THOUSANDS OF COMMERCIAL PACKAGES, JUST WAITING FOR THE COPYING. THESE SITES ARE THE MODERN DAY EQUIVALENT OF THE MYTHICAL EL DORADO

And there are those hackers whose intentions are evil. Take the case of one Kevin Poulson, for instance, who pulled a fast one on KISS-FM radio show which was running a phone-in competition to win a Porsche. The 102nd person to call would get the car. Kevin was able to take over the station's 25 lines, wait for 101 calls to go through and then he dropped down on the line at the right moment and won the car. He nearly got away with it but was later arrested for other crimes related to hacking and his phone scheme was exposed. Another notorious hacker is Agent Steal (aka) Justin Tanner Peterson. Steal was into hacking simply for the money. An atypical hacker, he was more like an

L.A. rocker type, with long blond hair and a decidedly punk attitude. Steal's thing was money-making schemes and scams, particularly stealing social engineering money. Agent Steal used to try to get other, preferably young, hackers involved in all kinds of crimes, including data tapping, breaking into central switching offices, credit card fraud, ATM fraud and various other activities. But every time the law came sniffing around, it was the young hackers who ended up in jail and Steal would turn state's evidence to save himself so that he could go on hacking. He teamed up with another hacker named Kevin Poulson and when the pair were caught, Steal didn't fancy the idea of going to jail so he agreed to cooperate with the State in return for immunity. Unfortunately for him, while he was cooperating with the FBI, he kept on abusing the system and when it was pointed out to the FBI that they were being scammed, Steal went on the run. He was eventually captured and is now doing time.

Another ominous and increasing occurrence on the Internet, particularly in the area of bulletin boards, is the illegal copying and publication, on the BBS, of copyrighted material from various publications, particularly the copying of photos from men's magazines for installation on the adult BBS channels. A random survey of adult BBS listings, particularly those which claim hundreds of thousands of files has turned up literally volumes of pirated images from various adult magazines. Although this is a blatant infringement of copyright laws, the practice seems to go unchecked and largely unnoticed, with most BBS operators assuming that no one is going to go to the trouble of pursuing and prosecuting them for copyright infringement. Yet, BBS operators charge subscribers and therefore they are making money from virtually stolen or "pirated" images. It's a simple matter for anyone with a reasonably high-resolution flatbed scanner to scan any images from whatever sources he chooses, into a computer for incorporation into a bulletin board. The reason that so much of this piracy goes unpunished is that few magazine publishers have the time to spend hours surfing the Internet to find out whether their materials are being pirated and used illegally.

The same is true of CD-ROMs. Suddenly, adult magazine and other publishers were finding out that many of their images were being scanned and produced on CD ROMs which were being marketed all over the country and abroad. Of course, this is patently illegal, infringing not only on the publisher's copyright, but on the photographer's as well, since most photographers, particularly of adult material, retain all but first or second serial rights to their material. Once someone has been spotted pirating images that belong to you, then the dilemma arises as to whether or not you wish to take legal action: how costly such litigation might be and whether there would be enough compensation to justify such an action.

CD-ROM piracy is actually far more prevalent than the theft of software or published, copyrighted material simply because this is a far more lucrative way to make money. With IRQ or FTP piracy, there's no way for the pirates to profit. But pirated copies of CD-ROMs can be produced for a small amount of money and pay big returns. The largest cost of a big selling title is production. Duplicating costs for CD-ROMs is a fraction of that. It's estimated that one fourth of all CD-ROM sales outside of the US are pirated copies. Bootleg copies of Disney's Lion King CD-ROM were available in Hong Kong before the disc was even released in the United States. Unfortunately, the authorities have been, until recently, reluctant to prosecute CD-ROM pirates in other countries. It was a common occurrence to see sidewalk vendors of bootlegged discs throughout China. However, when it came time for China's renewal of "favored-nation" trading status, Congress decided to act and the government threatened to take away China's much-needed trading status, which is designed to greatly reduce import duties to those countries granted favored nation status. For some time, things were quite testy, with China protesting that it would not, indeed could not find a way to control the pirating, copying and distributing of illicit CD-ROM discs in China. Admittedly, China is a huge country and the relative ease with which counterfeit discs could be manufactured did make the concept of stopping this practice seem impossible. However, the Chinese authorities finally blinked and agreed to begin trying to wipe out the production and sale of discs which was costing the American and European entertainment industry millions in lost royalties and sales revenues.

At last report, Chinese police were making arrests of vendors and had even raided and destroyed some manufacturing facilities. But even in Europe, there's a thriving market for unauthorized copies of best-selling titles. As with the copying of computer software, stopping this practice is far from simple.

With much of the CD-ROM pressing now being done offshore, the trend is expected to continue. In far too many pressing plants, it's not uncommon for one-offs to be duplicated even before the disc can be readied for shipment in the U.S. Many pressing plants now have strict controls on how a new disc is handled in an effort to reassure producers that their disc will be protected. Even the use of holographic stickers hasn't protected producers, as there is now a burgeoning market in black market holographic stickers.

In the U.S., authorities are going to great lengths to find software pirates. It's estimated that software piracy costs U.S. businesses five hundred million dollars a year. With that kind of potential profit at stake, producers have formed an organization to find and prosecute offenders. The Software Producers Association, (SPA) employs moles, people who spend their days tracking down BBS systems and FTP sites with rumored pirate software. Prosecutions have been increasing with seizure of systems a common occurrence. The SPA also offers rewards for information concerning software piracy. Many companies are caught only after being turned in by irate ex-employees.

One of the latest trends in law enforcement is the CD-ROM sting. More than a few CD-ROM producers have been approached by people who offer them big bucks to reproduce a best selling title. Since the CD-ROM industry is in something of a shakeup with many producers feeling a capital crunch, it's hard to resist the opportunity to turn several hundred thousands of dollars for a few days work. It remains to be seen whether these cases will hold up in court or will get thrown out as entrapment.

By far, the most common form of software piracy exists in businesses. It is not uncommon for a business to buy one copy of a word processing or spreadsheet package and then run that package on every computer that they own. Employees also take copies of the software home to run on their personal computers. WordPerfect Corp. estimates that as many as ten copies of illicitly copied WordPerfect software exist for every registered copy. Such measures as serial numbers that are verified over the office network and encryption keys have done little to stem the practice of illicitly copying software. The Software Producers Association has taken out ads in major computer magazines to warn businesses about potential fines and incarceration. Many producers of high ticket software have tried using hardware "locks" that mount on serial or parallel ports. However, these devices have not gained much acceptance among software buyers. They are prone to error and can cause hardware problems. As long as the desire to get something for nothing continues, software piracy will be with us.

This, and future articles will help you to keep up with some of the most important changes that might affect you as a newbie adult material surfer on the internet. Although it would take volumes to present with you everything, well try to keep up on some of the most important and some of the most interesting. And remember, if theres something specific you want to know more about - ask for it. We'll make every effort to find out for you. You can email us at dugent@shadow.net.

The big news, Windows 95, the question when. Previews of this product reveal a solid operating system behind a completely revamped user interface. The end result is a better tool for productivity. Long file names, no more double click vs. single click anxiety, 32 bit performance - a true upgrade to a good product. # latest joystick to enhance your sexy software for your hard drive, send a surge through your system!

OS/2 Warp

A competitor against the monolithic Microsoft, IBM has delivered a truly professional, powerful, and stable operating system, although a bit too late. Packed with productivity tools, cross platform compatibility, OS/2 does stand out as a contender in this arena. The biggest problem they (IBM) have is getting getting and staying in the mainstream. If that were to happen, we would see more applications developed for OS/2, more desktops using it, and a better future for the product. But as it stands, this 32 bit operating system cant get up enough steam to move on its own.

Video Conferencing

The new trend of Video conferencing is bustling with activity, providing users the capability to connect with each other visually as well as with sound. Use your imagination regarding what this means for adults who want to do more than just talk. Major players are Intel, AT&T, Datapoint Corp. Northern Telecom, Intel and Picturetel Corp. These companies can provide you with the hardware necessary to communicate via the telephone ( POTS plain old telephone service), or ISDN. Very, very Star Trek.
The systems require special adapters that reside in the computer that compress the video and audio signal that is received via a smart little camera that captures you (and what you're doing) and your conversation. Then the data is sent to another computer (hosting the same equipment), which uncompresses the data and voila. Expect to a lot for these systems, on average $2000.00 per computer, but also expect the prices to come down in the next year.
Who can use this technology? obviously those who require, or desire, visual contact in addition to voice. Some serious applications of this technology are already being applied in medicine, technical support forums ( for specific companies hosting wide area networks.), and many others, including adult material.

CD-ROM TECHNOLOGY

This field of computing is also changing rapidly. The field is already getting crowded with CD-ROMs of every description, particularly adult games, only a fraction of which you will see reviewed in this issue of Adult PC Guide. The big new news in CD ROMs , are recordable CD ROM systems. So now, just like home video cameras, home recording devices, you can now manufacture your own CD ROMs and put whatever you wish to on them. What use to cost more that $10,000 for system, can be purchased for less than $2000. This makes publishing multimedia a greater attraction for a lot of companies or even individuals. As a result expect to start seeing a plethora of CD ROM applications flooding the market.

And what does this give the adult material fan? Well, for one thing, an image that's sharper and clearer, faster and better. 18008462000
